CAMPBELL FREED ON FIRST BALLOT

CURTIS, DORAN PUT DRY SPY IN SENATE OFFICE

"MAN IN GREEN HAT" CAUSED DRY PROTEST

Agent Sent to Check Up Tale of Bootlegger's Activities.

LIST OF CUSTOMERS AT CAPITOL GUARDED

Names Withheld for Fear of Causing Candidates Embarrassment.

Revelation that a Federal prohibition agent, acting as an informer and undercover man, was stationed in the Senate Office Building during the last three months of the session of Congress which closed in the early summer was made yesterday and confirmation of the report given by Dr James M. Doran, then prohibition commissioner, and by Vice President Curtis.

According to Dr. Doran and Mr Curtis, the agent was placed in the Senate Office Building following complaints by dry members that a bootlegger, believed to be "the Man in the Green Hat," was using the stationery room in the Senate building to carry on his business.

Dr. Doran also revealed that copies of a list of customers of the bootlegger on Capitol Hill are on file at the Department of Justice and the Treasury Department, which formerly controlled the Prohibition Bureau.

Names on List Kept Secret.

As a direct result of the placing of the undercover agent in the Senate Office Building, the Prohibition Bureau succeeded on February 18 in trapping "The Man in the Green Hat," George L. Cassiday, through a fake order. Cassiday, under sentence for possession of 1 pint, is out on bond awaiting action on an appeal.

When the report was circulated that an agent had been placed in the Senate Building to spy on the bootlegger and his senator and representative customers, confirmation was sought from Dr. Doran, who said:

Curtis Aided in Move.

"The report that the Prohibition Bureau placed an agent in the Senate Office Building with the cooperation of Vice President Curtis is entirely correct.

"Cassiday had repeatedly been arrested on Capitol Hill as a bootlegger during my incumbency as prohibition commissioner. It was well known that he had been operating first in the House Office Building and more recently in the Senate Office Building, continuously from 1920 to 1929. His activities had received Nation-wide publicity, and the assertion was made in certain quarters that the Prohibition Bureau was winking at his violations of the law in dealing with members of Congress.

"Vice President Curtis assisted us in placing a special agent in the stationery room and the investigation proved so effective that Cassiday was driven out of the building."

Silent on Customer List.

Commissioner Doran declined to comment on Cassiday's list of customers except to admit he had seen it and that it was "an extensive" compilation of members of Congress.

Reached at his home in Topeka, Kans., Vice President Curtis, when questioned regarding the placing of the agent in the Senate building, said:

"It is true that I cooperated with Commissioner Doran and other officials of the Prohibition Bureau in an effort to secure proper observance and enforcement of the prohibition laws in the Senate Office Building.

"I helped to place an agent of the bureau in the building when it came to my attention that the so-called "Man in the Green Hat" was making his headquarters there as a bootlegger. We found that he was dealing with a number of senators and Senate employes and succeeded in putting a stop to his activities inside the building."

Denies Encouraging Cassiday.

Denial was made by the Vice President that he or any other executive official had encouraged or protected Cassiday in his activities in the Senate Office Building.

It was recalled that at the time Cassiday's list of customers was on file in the Treasury Department, efforts were being made by the Attorney General's office to have the United States Supreme Court declare

Calvin Coolidge Says:

Too much emphasis can not be placed on the constructive efforts our Government is making for international peace. We have not only secured by two epoch-making treaties an agreement among the great naval powers for complete limitation on the building of all kinds of war vessels, but we are taking an active part in the movement to compose the difference between France and Italy so that they may be able to join in a treaty to the same end.

When Europe is financially depressed, when taxation is an almost unbearable burden, her people and governments will naturally desire to take advantage at once of the savings that can be made in public expenditure by reduced armaments. They could then avoid the new outlays for fortifications and other equipment proposed in the name of national security. Unless the burden is diminished the people involved will reach a point where national security will be of no benefit. They will have nothing to secure.

We should not criticize. We should not underestimate their great difficulties. It is only through true sympathy that we can help. We seek to promote a humanitarian policy of peace and friendship among distressed people.

ITALO-FRENCH NAVY TRUCE GIBSON'S AIM

U. S. Diplomat Submits Plan for Holiday Till 1936 to Latin Powers.

TARDIEU HELD WILLING

Geneva, Oct. 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A naval truce between France and Italy until 1936 is, in substance, the proposal placed before the highest officials of the two Latin powers by Hugh S. Gibson United States Ambassador to Belgium, in his efforts to clear the way for a successful meeting of the Preparatory Disarmament Commission next month.

In informed circles here it is thought that the American diplomat's suggestion for breaking the Franco-Italian deadlock have slightly better than an even chance of being accepted in Paris and Rome.

Ambassador Gibson early last week lead before Prime Minister Andre Tardieu and Foreign Minister Aristide Briand the suggestion that all questions of parity and amour propre raised during the London Naval Conference last winter and kept alive at Franco-Italian naval negotiations since then be forgotten for the time being and that both Italy and France publicly announce their building programs for the next five years.

He is expected to place the same thought before Prime Minister Benito Mussolini, whom h saw toda.

Obtaining such declarations from the French and Italians as to what their programs will be is the keystone of the mission entrusted to Gibson by Washington.

Pierre L. Boal, assistant chief of the Western European Division of the State Department, who carried Japan's ratification of the London treaty to London, also carried details of Gibson's instructions to the British foreign office. He is understood to have obtained Prime Minister MacDonald's approval before the American diplomat broached the subject with the Quay d'Orsay.

It is also learned that Japan, Great Britian and the United States are united in putting pressure or persuasion upon France and Italy to adjust their differences before the preparatory disarmament commission, on which Gibson is the chief American delegate, convenes in an effort to complete its labors. Even in

MAYOR OF CHICAGO GOES UNDER KNIFE

Thompson Stricken as Many Await Speech Aimed at Mrs. McCormick.

CONDITION IS FAVORABLE

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—A surgeon's knife brought a sudden end today to Mayor William Hale Thompson's dramatic entry into the finale of a furious political campaign.

Stricken with acute appendicitis, Chicago's Republican mayor was rushed, protesting, to a hospital at the very moment that an overflow crowd in a downtown theater waited to hear his characteristically mordant araignment of his political foes—in this case a member of the same party, Ruth Hanna McCormick, senatorial nominee.

An operation was performed immediately. At 2 p. m. he was brought from the operating room and a bulletin issued by his secretary said there was no immediate cause for alarm.

For two years Mayor Thompson had been in deliate health, almost a stranger to the public that had known him as a familiar dynamo of speech on the platforms of every ward in Chicago.

Up and down the land he had toured to expound his theories on flood control and his favorite doctrine of "America first." Then, following his election in 1927, his physician warned him that he must exercise the utmost care of his health, and the "Big Bill" of other days lapsed into silence, remote from public eye and ear.

Politics was the love of his life, and he could not remain aloof. Returning from a vacation on the Eastern seaboard a few weeks ago, he pronounced himself in the fittest condition of years. There was common talk in the press that he would be a candidate for a fourth mayoralty term at the primaries next spring.

"One election at a time," had been his cryptic response to inquirers, then he plunged headlong into the current United States senatorial campaign, avowing his support of James Hamilton Lewis, the wet Democratic nominee, and creating a breach in his own party ranks. The Republican county organization, however, re-

CLOSE BATTLE FOR DELAWARE SENATOR SEEN

Each Vote Treasured as Only 70,000 Will Be Cast Tuesday.

DRY DEMOCRATS MAY SWITCH TO HASTINGS

Rocky Path for Bayard, Backed by Du Ponts, Raskob, Forecast.

ATTRACTION AS WET HELD QUESTIONABLE

G. O. P. Rival to Cite Item in Tariff Which Gave Jobs to 1,000.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 31.—A vote is a very precious thing in this State, sort of a rare nugget, in fact, because only about 70,000 will be cast in Tuesday's election to determine whether Senator Dan G. Hastings or the wet former Senator Bayard is to be elected, a matter most important at least to them.

It is easily seen, therefore, that the outcome hangs by a thread. If one of these gentlemen happens to make a few persons mad because of the color of his hair or his manner of speech then his campaign is seriously endangered. It is not wholly inconceivable, indeed, that one of them could lose the race because he failed properly to tip the taxicab man or the waiter. It is a campaign in which not a single vote can be spared.

It is the fact that Bayard or, rather, those behind his candidacy have made quite a group mad that causes me to believe that Hastings may pull through, which is quite an accomplishment for a Republican senator this year. It would be such a rare accomplishment, in fact, that Hastings would be something after Tuesday to be looked at and pointed to, or even placed in the Smithsonian Institution.

Hopes of Marvel.

For months and months Josiah P. Marvel, Democratic State chairman and backbone of the party in this State for years, the one most credited with holding it together, was working for the Democratic senatorial nomination, considering as did every one else that it was worth something this year. Marvel went about the State getting delegates and came to be convinced that he had the nomination in the bag. All this time Bayard was saying nothing. He was even asked if he planned to run but would not commit himself.

Then about two weeks before the convention Bayard announced. Pierre S. and Irenee du Pont and Chairman Raskob are believed to have been responsible for his getting in. They wanted a wet and dry fight and could get no satisfaction out of Marvel and Hastings.

They have a way of holding little party primaries preceding the conventions in this State. They are strictly family affairs, the State having nothing to do with them. Well, in the Democratic primary, if it can be called that, Marvel and Bayard came out fairly even. The impression was gained, rightly or wrongly, that Marvel got a few more than Bayard. Inasmuch as the primary is

FOURTH TERM FOR RITCHIE IS CRUX OF FIGHT

Maryland G.O.P. Declares Governor Has Become Virtual King.

ODDS ON DEMOCRATS GIVEN BY GAMBLERS

BROENING'S BACKERS SEE 50,000 MARGIN

Tydings Asserts Incumbent Will Win by at Least 67,500 Votes.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 31.—There will be two King Alberts in the world unless the voters do the right thing Tuesday—King Albert, of Belgium, and King Albert, of Maryland.

This is the warning the Republican orators are sounding as Maryland's gubernatorial campaign draws to a close. The point they are making, of course, is that Albert Cabell Ritchie, now serving his third term as governor, has been in office long enough, and that to give him a fourth term would be to make him a virtual king.

The time has come, the Republicans say, to put a new man in the executive mansion at Annapolis, and the man they offer is the mayor of this city, good-natured, lodge-loving, William F. Broening.

Republicans Fight Habit.

But what the Republicans are up against is more than a man; it is a habit—the Ritchie habit. And from all indications it is a habit which the Free State is not yet ready to break.

Gov. Ritchie should win over Mayor Broening on Tuesday by a comfortable margin. The smart boys along Charles street, the boys who like to say it with yellowbacks, are so certain of this that they will lay you 2 to 1 or better to prove their sincerity.

Around Democratic headquarters you hear them talking not so much about a Ritchie victory as about the size of that victory. They are hoping that it will be a smashing one. Then, they believe, Gov. Ritchie will be irresistible as a presidential candidate in 1932.

Gilt With Figures.

Naturally, you don't hear anything like that around Republican headquarters. The men there are just as glib with figures as are those at Democratic headquarters, and, given a pencil and paper, they can elect Mayor Broening by 50,000 or more.

That is the estimate of young Edward E. Hargest, chairman of the Republican city committee, and a generalissimo in the Broening forces. He thinks that Broening will clean up in the counties and arrive at Baltimore with a lead of something like 40,000. Then he expects Baltimore City to sweeten this by 10,000, maybe more.

Senator Millard D. Tydings, who has been waging a vigorous campaign for Gov. Ritchie, not only is more confident than Mr. Hargest, but he is more precise.

"Gov. Ritchie," he says, "will win by 67,500 votes."

AFTER CAMPBELL'S ACQUITTAL

GEORGETOWN DOWN MICH. STATE, 14-13

Scalzi, Hero, Runs Back for Kick-Off; Takes Pass for Touchdowns.

12,000 SEE THRILLER

By JACK ESPEY.

There was a hot time in the old town last night and the Halloween spirit wasn't totally responsible. Out at Griffith Stadium was generated a goodly portion of the fun as Georgetown's hitherto disappointing eleven rose up with blood in its eye and smeared mighty Michigan State before a crowd of 12,000 pop-eyed fans. The score was 14 to 13.

It was one of the biggest upsets of the season, for the white-jerseyed Spartans from the West came to town with scalps of Colgate and three other teams hanging at their belts from an early season campaign replete with victorious eats.

Michigan State, favored in the betting at odds of almost 2 to 1, never was in the lead. Georgetown, through the work of its talented quarter back, Johnny Scalzi, who seldom fails to produce a thrill, snatched the advantage in the second quarter and held it to the final whistle despite a furious counter attack.

Georgetown made only five first downs to thirteen for its foe, but further gaining was unnecessary as events proved. Its two touchdowns and subsequent extra points were manufactured in three plays.

Toward the close of the second quarter, following two rousing standoffs of Spartan attacks at the goal line, the Hilltoppers shot Johnny Bosek into the game with instructions to run the ends and forward pass. He followed orders to the letter, for on the first play thereafter he streaked around the State left for 16 yards from his 25-yard line and followed up by throwing a 10-yard pass to Scalzi, who romped unimpeded 45 yards separating him and

GODDARD TO STATE RESULT OF TESTS

Acquittal of Campbell Not to Halt Effort to Prove Ballistics Theory.

FATE OF CRAFT AT STAKE

Does the verdict of not guilty which freed Herbert M. Campbell carry with it the concomitant verdict of guilty for ballistics for misrepresenting itself as an exact science?

Never has the subject of ballistics as an exact science reached into the discussions of criminology in all part of the country as in the Campbell case.

The trial has been alluded to as the trial of ballistics as an exact science versus ballistics as a theory. The only tangible result to date is that twelve men overruled the decisions of Col. Calvin H. Goddard and Dr. Wilmer Souder and virtually, if not actually, said that those experts erred in their decision that Campbell's gun committed the murder.

Assistant United States Attorney William H. Collins branded Mr. Albert H. Hamilton, defense expert, as an "outrageous faker." Hamilton had decided that the Campbell gun was not the death weapon. Yet, in spite of the Government's contention that Hamilton is unreliable, the jury overruled the decisions of two reputable scientists, who had concluded that Campbell's gun fired the death shots.

Men have been sent to prison on ballistics testimony—some have been sent to their death. The question arises whether ballistics, in its present form, has heard its death knell, or will it revert to a status in court evidence as merely corroborative of other direct evidence.

The epochal tests which were expected to decide once and for all times whether ballistics is infallible did not occur. Col. Goddard had not completed his examination of the ten

JURY REQUIRES 32 MINUTES TO REACH VERDICT

Virginian Did Not Slay Baker Girl, They Report.

FREED MAN HUGGED BY FAMILY IN COURT

CLOSING ARGUMENTS HIT BALLISTICS PAIR

Prosecutor Flays Hamilton While Defense Attacks Col. Goddard.

"Not guilty," is the verdict of twelve jurors who late yesterday freed Herbert M. Campbell of the Government charge that he slew Mary Baker.

After a day of arguments before the jury the case was placed in their hands at 3:27 o'clock. Thirty-two minutes later Vernon E. Chappell, foreman of the jury, announced the decision.

The courtroom, crowded with Campbell's relatives, broke into a demonstration, which was promptly stifled by court attaches. The accused man eyed the foreman intently as the verdict was about to be given.

"Have you reached a verdict in the case of the Government versus Herbert M. Campbell?" queried the court clerk, Wesley Gardner.

"We have," answered Mr. Chappell.

"What is the verdict?"

"Not guilty."

Acquitted Man Felicitated.

There was a moment of silence. Then the import of the decision seemed to settle upon the gathering, and friends and relatives rushed forward to grasp the hand of Mr. Campbell and relatives clasped him warmly.

Campbell gripped the hands of his counsel, Charles Henry Smith, Lucian Vandoren and Herbert S. Ward.

From them he moved onward to the jurors. Campbell was patently grateful. Each of the twelve men wrung his hand and he thanked them individually. The voice that had remained firm under withering grilling had a trembling note as he voiced his thanks.

Through the crowd that had gathered around him a small figure pressed. It was his wife, Mrs. Ruth Callahan Campbell. They embraced. She hung closely to him as he received the felicitations of his friends.

Then an old man, carrying a cane, came from the crowd and grasped his son, who had emerged from the shadow of the electric chair. Mr. Loudoun Campbell, the parent, gripped his boy around the shoulders and whispered an unheard message to him.

Relatives Surround Campbell.

There was succession of relatives, Frank Campbell, his brother; Edwin Campbell, his stepson; sisters and in-laws, each of whom voiced his jubilation at the acquittal.

"Have you any comment, Mr. Campbell?"

"Everything that's been done for me I owe largely to my wife and brother Frank. And I still say that my gun is not the gun that killed Mary Baker."

"Do you want the gun again?"

"Sure I do."

The most pathetic figure in the whole trial was not present when the verdict was rendered. From the time

Brother and Sister, Scared By Insane, Flee Gallinger

Children, Reported Tubercular, Wander Barefoot in Rain for Hours Before Reaching Home; Mother Criticizes Hospital Nurse; Superintendent Silent.

Two tubercular youngsters strolled unnoticed out of Gallinger Hospital and wandered barefooted in the rain for two and a half hours Wednesday night before they reached the home of their mother, Mrs. Della C. Deavers, at 322 C street southeast, it was disclosed last night.

The children are Virginia Deavers, 10 years old, and her brother, James Clyde, 9 years old. They were placed in the institution Monday for observation, but their escapade terminated the examination until yesterday when it was resumed by physicians at Providence Hospital who are reported to have found a diagnosis of tuberculosis.

According to Mrs. Deavers, who is separated from her husband and receives $4 weekly from the Catholic Charities for support of herself and three children, Virginia and James Clyde declared they had run away from Gallinger because they "were placed in the same building with the insane people, and they were scared all the time by the shrieking and yelling of the crazy people and couldn't sleep."

Clad only in the thin bed garments which are provided by the hospital, and minus shoes, stockings, hats and coats, Virginia and James Clyde evaded the nurse in the Children's Ward about 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and went downstairs and out of the building, across the hospital grounds, and out into the street where they roamed, apparently unnoticed, until almost 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Deavers says that as soon as

The Decline of the Ku Klux Klan

What was the actual strength of this organization—the most curious phenomenon in the post-war period—at its peak?

What is its actual strength this year?

How much money did it provide for its high officials and organizers?

The answer to these questions and many others, taken from the official records of the Ku Klux Klan, have been obtained by The Washington Post.

Up until 1925 the Ku Klux Klan enrolled an astonishing number of individuals. The actual figure has never been revealed before.

The members in good standing in 1926 numbered in the millions, which accounts for the part that the Klan played in the election of that year.

Since then the membership of the organization has dwindled at an astonishing rate.

Today there are surprisingly few persons on the roll of the order. The decreasing curve would indicate that before long the Klan will remain only on the pages of the Nation's political history.

The authoritative figures on the Klan will be published tomorrow in—

Gushing Oil Well Brings Fire Fear to Oklahoma City

Schools in Threatened Section Close and Residents Have to Flee—Troops Are Called to Aid of Civil Authorities.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—An army of a half thousand men, military and civil, guarded Oklahoma's capital tonight against the menace of a potential fire dragon—a gigantic wild oil well—that roared at the city's edge.

Nine units of the Oklahoma National Guard were called to assist civil authorities in protecting life and property in the vicinity of the No. 1 C. E. Stout well, which since last night has been hurling prodigious quantities of oil and gas into the air less than a mile from the main business district.

All activities in the immediate threatened area on the southeast outskirts of the wholesale district were suspended.

Householders were warned not to light fires and residents nearest the well—mostly Negroes—were ordered to vacate their homes.

Six schools considered to be menaced by low-hanging clouds of gas were closed for the day, making a holiday for more than 2,300 pupils.

Trains were barred from tracks near the well because of danger of their engine fires igniting the gas. Automobiles and trucks were forbidden entrance into the danger zone.

The well, estimated to have a daily production of 60,000 barrels of oil and 100,000,000 cubic feet of gas, tore loose last night when sand cut its connections.

Like the "Wild Mary" Sudik, famous outlaw that defied control for eleven days last spring, ordinary methods failed and a special device known as a "Christmas tree," a heavy steel that selection of the jury began until the defendant received his vindication she was not observed in the courtroom.

That one is Mrs. Loudoun Campbell, mother of the accused, who is at her home. She is ill. Her blessings upon her son were given last night. It was the illness and the persuasion of her husband that kept her from the courtroom.

Only One Ballot Taken.

The twelve men who had been locked up for 11 days in their consideration of the case, dispersed after the verdict. Mr. Chappell said that the decision was reached on the first ballot.

Before the case was finally rested with the jurors and they had received their instruction from Justice Jesse C. Adkins relative to the difference in first and second degree murder, Mr. Vandoren arose and asked the unusual request.

"Your honor, I wish that you would instruct the jury to bring in either a verdict of first degree murder or acquittal."

The justice declined to modify his instructions.

Throughout the day a flood of oratory was poured into the ears of the jury.

Collins Denounces Campbell.

Campbell heard himself denounced as a man with a sex complex and painted as the "worst philander" that Assistant United States Attorney William H. Collins had ever encountered.

His defense counsel conceded that his client was a "liar, a romancer and an adventurer," but denied that he was a murderer.

Argument began when it was announced at the opening of court that Col. Calvin H. Goddard had not finished his tests of the bullets which he undertook in an attempt to demonstrate the infallibility of ballistics. Consideration for the jurors prompted a decision to submit the case to them without awaiting outcome of the tests.

Argument of Prosecutor.

After brief argument over the nature of the instructions to be given the jury Mr. Collins walked leisurely before the jury, folded his arms and launched into a verbal indictment of the accuused.

After a few prefatory remarks he asked, "Now, what is the evidence?"

"Mary Baker is dead. The Government contends that Mary Baker received the mortal wound in the District of Columbia."

Discussing the cause of death he continued: "The disagreement between the doctors is important only in this regard. The indictment is laid on two counts. If you are satisfied that her death was caused by strangulation you will return your verdict on that count. If, however, you are satisfied that the death was caused by gunshot wounds, then you will return your verdict on that count.

Crime of Speed Stressed.

Mr. Collins depicted the grewsome scene at Sixteenth and B streets that attracted the attention of the three Government witnesses. "Now we have evidence to show with what terrible speed this crime was committed. We have from witnesses that the car was seen from approximately 7 o'clock that night until the time that it was found the next day, at the point of abandonment."

Then he recited the testimony of Mr. Willis, who saw a man in a car near the spot where the girl's clothes were found in a trap basin. This was at 6:20 o'clock.

Campbell's entry into the case was described by the prosecutor. "You have his characterizations of Barrere. You have his suggestions that Barrere is the type who would have committed such a crime."

Two Pairs of Gloves Cited.

Taking up the case from the point where Campbell turned the gun over to authorities and identified gloves found in the trap basin as his, Mr. Collins recited the defendant's numerous alibis.

Then suddenly he thundered: "I leave it to you to decide which gloves better fit Campbell's hands, the ones found in the trap basin or the ones belatedly produced in court."

Hamilton Called "Faker."

Mr. Collins scathingly denounced Mr. Albert H. Hamilton, defense expert, as "an outrageous faker. I think it was a terrible imposition on the family of Herbert Campbell to have to pay $250 for his services."

"He is absolutely unworthy of belief. I think it will be a long while before he comes back to the District of Columbia. If they give him what he's worth, the Campbell family will get back their $250 and allow Hamilton to receive his compensation from the press."

He characterized Campbell as "an incorrigible and unmitigated liar." "He lied about Barrere. He lied on the stand, right here in the courtroom," declared the prosecutor.

Alibis Are Mentioned.

Then Mr. Collins cautioned the jurors to accept the stories of alibi witnesses as their stories impressed them and to hold their regard for their interest in the case.

He climaxed his address by an appeal to the judgment of the jurors. "Let no sentiments be allowed to enter into your deliberations; be clam, cool, dispassionate, devoid of sympathy, and then return your verdict on the facts and evidence presented in the case. If you do that, I will be satisfied."

Drawing himself to his full height, Mr. Smith then began his defense.

In a low voice he said: "Gentlemen, this is grim business, in which you must determine the guilt or innocence of the accused.

Case Called Circumstantial.

"It is not difficult for you, as it is for most juries, because it is agreed by everybody that the Government is depending for conviction on a chain of circumstantial evidence.

"Never in my experience have I seen a man placed on trial under such unusual circumstances. When we begin to examine the evidence in this case, even casually, there is nothing to indicate the direct guilt of the defendant or even a suspicion of guilt.

"When the defendant stood up, none of the witnesses of the attack undertook to describe any point of similarity between the man they saw and Herbert Campbell.

Mr. Smith ridiculed the idea that any criminal asasult could have been made upon the girl at Sixteenth and B streets. "We say this girl was killed by a man who had ravished her, and when he saw the enormity of the crime he decided to close the book and put three bullets in her body to complete the job, so that she could not identify him.

Smith Admits Campbell Lied.

Mr. Smith conceded that the defendant was a liar. "But it takes a man to admit it. Campbell had a craving for publicity. He wanted it. When the occasion came to obtain some, he took it, and this is greatly responsible for his appearance here."

He described Campbell's acts as childish instincts. He wanted to see visions, dream dreams, and recount them as facts.

Tracing the act of Campbell in turning over the gun to authorities, he took the testimony of Capt. Edward J. Kelly. So far as the witness is concerned in this case, Mr. Smith said that he was willing to accept Capt. Kelly's testimony.

"I want to pay my compliments to Capt. Kelly by saying that I have never in my experience known a man who, on a witness stand, displayed a more accurate memory or a more earnest desire to tell th truth."

Goddard Taken to Task.

Mr. Smith then took Col Goddard to task for not fulfilling his promise to conduct the tests. "It took him four hours to tell whether Herbert Campbell's gun fired the death bullets. Now he has been at work for 72 hours and has not ended his tests of 10 bullets.

"If there is any evidence even to suggest that Herbert Campbell is the killer of Mary Baker, it depends upon the testimony of this man Goddard. Without it, gentlemen, you have not a suspicious circumstance."

"My friend representing the Government in this case has been fair. He has taken the position that if Goddard could not substantiate the gun——"

When Mr. Collins objected to this point, the defense counsel did not press the point, but dwelt at length upon the alibi of his client. "The evidence is convincing that Herbert Campbell was not in the District of Columbia at 6 o'clock on the night of April 11."

He launched into another attack on the reliability of ballistics testimony.

"Now," he said, "Campbell has been a fool—Campbell is my friend and I hate to admit that a friend of mine has been a fool—but I am forced to admit it in this case. But, gentlemen, he has paid for his folly.

"Gentlemen, if you believe that Herbert Campbell committed this murder, don't hesitate to bring in a verdict of first degree murder."

Mr. Vandoren supplemented Mr. Smith's defensive remarks. He stressed the discovery of stolen goods in the trap basin and told the jury that this discovery might be a highly significant fact in the determination of their verdict.

Lack of Motive Pointed Out.

"This is not a case of Herbert M. Campbell against the Government. It is a case of Herbert M. Campbell versus Col. Calvin H. Goddard. Without the testimony of that witness we would not be here today."

He sought to impress on the minds of the jurors that under the law Campbell is presumed to be innocent until the jury begins its deliberations. He pointed to the absence of motive and emphasized that there was no proof presented that Campbell ever knew or saw Mary Baker.

Mr. Collins then closed his case with a vitriolic assault upon Mr. Hamilton, who was branded as a "faker put on by the defense, who would send a man to his death for a $5 bill.

Goddard Is Defended.

"There is no basis for the attack on Col. Goddard. He gave his testimony honestly. Whatever verdict you render will not be a test of his honesty.

"Doesn't this case resemble to you the old story of the 'perfect crime,' the murderer being close to the scene, the murderer working in with authorities?

"Keep the facts clear in your mind. It makes no difference to me whether you find a verdict of guilty or innocent. If you decide that he is guilty you must convict. If you believe him innocent it is your duty to acquit him.

Adkins Instructs Jury.

Justice Adkins began his instruction to the jury by complimenting the opposing counsel upon the rapidity which characterized their conduct of the trial. He admonished the jury to lay aside all their feeling of horror of the crime.

It was within their province, he said, to decide whether the girl had been strangled or shot to death. Regardless of their decision as to the means used to consummate the crime, he said that they could bring in a general verdict, if they chose to cover the two counts in the indictment.

He stressed to them the presumption of innocence of the accused and placed the burden of proof upon the Government. Then he advised them upon the difference between direct and circumstantial evidence, that the weight of ballistics testimony could be decided by themselves and that they should not substitute for their own opinions the opinions of ballistics experts.

He also told the jurors that they had the sole right of determining credibility of witnesses and that in order to convict they must decide that the murder was committed in this jurisdiction.

Instructions Are Ended.

As he closed his instruction, the courtroom, which housed the largest crowd of the trial, breathed freely and a flurry followed.

All through the day spectators had sat rigid and gazed fixedly as lawyers battled before the jury.

The elder Mr. Campbell sat erect and hung upon every word spoken. Mrs. Campbell, wife of the accused, listened with rapt attention to every sentence that dropped from the lips of the lawyers.

When the jury filed out, Campbell was taken to a cell on the lower floor. Mrs. Campbell conversed freely with relatives and did not seem to be worried about the verdict. "Of course I'm not worried. They can't do anything else but acquit him. I've known it all along."

Downstairs the defendant laughed and joked with his attendant.

"I'm going to sell you a lot in Virginia one of these days, Gus," he said.

"What am I going to do? I'm going back to Virginia and sell real estate. I will open my office again. In the spring I'm going to reopen my golf course."

Has Bush Case Tip for Kelly.

After the verdict had been announced and the usual handclasps were given, Campbell, his wife, and his stepson, Edwin Callahan, passed through a large crowd in the courtroom to the portico of the courthouse.

As he went through the door he noticed Capt. Kelly.

"Say, captain," he said with a grin, "I've got some information for you on the Bush case."

When he stepped outside the door he hesitated a minute and inhaled deeply of the fresh air.

Arm in arm the three stepped down the stairs of the courthouse. They posed for photographers and then entered a taxicab.

Some time later a cab carrying three persons went over the Highway Bridge. In that direction is the culvert where the girl's body was found.

Campbell, who returned to his home in Virginia Highlands yesterday afternoon, took dinner with his wife and stepson at the home of his brother and later returning to his own home.

Another suspect, the first to be tried by a jury, had been vindicated. Another cycle in the celebrated murder case was ended. Authorities found themselves at the beginning of a new cycle—where all have begun—at Sixteenth and B streets northwest.

ARGUMENTS HEARD ON CROSSING WRIT

State Roads Board Seeking to Dissolve Injunction on eKnsington Job.

CASE UNDER ADVISEMENT

Arguments on the petition of the Maryland State Roads Commission, for dissolution of the temporary injunction holding up the grade crossing elimination project at Kensington, were heard yesterday by Judge Robert B. Peter in Circuit Court at Rockville. Testimony before a special examiner was taken by the judge for study. Because of the involved testimony, it is probable that the judge's decision will not be reached for several weeks.

The case of the nine plaintiffs, seeking to bar construction of an overhead bridge at Lincoln avenue, is divided into two parts. The first claim is that the State Roads Commission did not follow prescribed legal procedure in arriving at the location and secondly, that the commission abused its discretionary powers when it decided to place an overhead bridge at Lincoln avenue.

Following arguments by Miss Vivian V. Simpson and John K. Oxley, of plaintiff's counsel, Capt. Joseph C. Cissel, attorney for the commission, declared that public notice of hearing, hearing, decision as to location, public advertisement in newspapers calling for bids and award of contract after opening of bids had been set forth as necessary by the injunction, to comply with legal procedure and that because of the lack of these, the injunction had been issued.

He told the court that these formalities had been carried out and that therefore the injunction should be dissolved, having served its purpose.

H. C. Smith, of plaintiffs' counsel, however, stated that the law requires that a contract be entered into between the railroad involved and the roads commission whereby the railroad agrees to pay one-half the cost of the elimination and one-half the cost of approaches. This has not been done, he declared.

Judge Peter expressed himself as much amused by an account he had read in the newspapers, which declared that Maj. E. Brooke Lee, county Democratic leader, and Parker Weller, both witnesses for the plaintiffs, had contradicted each other. He pointed out that the testimony of one or the other should have been stricken out as a side can not impeach its own witnesses. Maj. Lee testified he had not told Mr. Weller that he intended forcing the construction of Connecticut avenue. Mr. Weller testified that Maj. Lee had advised him to purchase certain land because he planned to push Connecticut avenue through.

The entire mass of evidence is replete with objections, almost every bit in the record having been challenged and exceptions noted. The task of deciding these legal questions is expected to keep Judge Peter busy for some time.

Capt. Cissel stated, in the course of the argument, that the contract for construction of the bridge had been awarded to Lignon & Lignon, of Baltimore, low bidders.

Montgomery County's match thief is believed to have resumed his activities in the suburban area around Silver Spring. After several months, two robberies were reported yesterday in which the thief or thieves had littered the houses robbed with burnt matches.

John Dolan reported to police at the Silver Spring Substation that his home on Highland drive, Woodside, had been entered and a woman's wrist watch and $8 taken. The house was entered through a garage to the first floor. Burnt match sticks were scattered all over the place. Policemen Joseph Nolte and Charles Barnes are investigating.

Dr. H. E. Patten, of Silver Spring, reported that a house owned by him near Wheaton had been entered by breaking a window, but that he could find nothing missing. Policeman George Windham is working on this robbery.

Services for William Nichols, 9 years old, who was fatally injured when struck by an ambulance Wednesday afternoon, will be held this morning at 11:30 o'clock in the Colonial Funeral Home of W. Reuben Pumphrey, jr., at Rockville, owner of the ambulance. Burial will be at Gaithersburg.

The boy was hit by the vehicle on the Rockville pike near the White Flint Country Club, where his father is caretaker. He was pronounced dead upon arrival at Georgetown Hospital.

The ambulance, driven by James Carlisle, of Rockville, was hurrying to the scene of a well cave-in near Glenmont, where 19-year-old Louis Barrett was held prisoner under several tons of rock which had lined the well.

Young Barrett was reported as imery County etaoinshrdluetaoin..... proved last night at the Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring, where he was taken when pulled from the well, nearly five hours after the cave-in. He is expected to leave the hospital shortly.

Carlisle is to face Judge Charles W. Woodward in county police court at Rockville this morning on charges of manslaughter and driving without a chauffeur's permit. He is at liberty on bond of $500.

Mrs. John A. Holmes, of Rockville, has been reelected president of the Maryland Federation of Republican Women, which is holding its annual convention in Baltimore. She also is a member of the Republican State central committee for Montgomery County and has taken an active part in the present campaign.

Tons of Tobacco Burned In Durham; Boy Dies

Durham, N. C., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—A Negro boy lost his life, and 1,100,000 pounds of tobacco were destroyed in the burning of one of the American Tobacco Co.'s storage warehouses here this afternoon.

The flames were brought under control by 4 o'clock. For two hours during the blaze the City of Durham was without power as the electric power station is near the burned warehouse. Firemen estimated the damage at $300,000. Willie Glenn was the boy burned to death.

Reserve Officers Form School in Martinsburg

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 31.—An officers reserve school was formed here last night with fifteen officers of the United States Army Reserve Corps present, under the direction of Capt. J. J. Harvey, United States Army. Edgar M. Sites, captain, Reserve Corps, was made local instructor.

The school will meet twice a month. Representation from both Jefferson and Berkley counties was present for the organization.

Comment of Principals As Campbell Case Ends

Following are comments of principals in the Campbell trial on its outcome:

Assistant District Attorney William H. Collins said:

"I have no complaint to make upon the verdict. I performed my duty as required in presenting the Government's case as I did."

Mr. Lucian Vandoren, of the defense counsel:

"I think the jury rendered a fair and proper verdict. Mr. Collins has been eminently fair with us."

Mrs. Ruth Callahan Campbell: "It is no surprise to me. They could not have done otherwise. Please say that I am very grateful to our friends who have remained steadfast with us throughout it all. I can never repay them for their loyalty."

Herbert M. Campbell: "I have no hard feelings for any one. I found out this much though—that I know who my friends are. Friendship is consecrated in adversity. I did not know I had so many friends until now. I'm going to reopen my golf course, but I'll do my advertising in the advertising columns. I still say that Capt. Kelly is the whitest man that ever lived."

Charles Henry Smith, chief defense counsel: "It is what I expected. Mr. Collins has been very just and made a very fair plea. It was, however, more of a fight than I anticipated."

Frank G. Campbell, brother of Herbert M. Campbell:

"The verdict merely recites what I have known all along, and, what is more to the point, what officials in charge of the investigation knew. However, if the net result of the trial is to stop the procession of men to the electric chair on the hazy conclusions of ballistics experts, the trial of Herbert Campbell will be worth all it has cost. Mr. Collins has been just and fair."

Cities in Virginia Mark Halloween

Lynchburg, Petersburg and Hopewell Stage Colorful Festivities.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 31.—Thirty thousand people lined the downtown streets tonight for the fifth annual Halloween festival. Streets were cleared of vehicular traffic and given over to the crowd of revelers until 11 o'clock. A parade in which there were 100 floats preceded the carnival at the city stadium where Miss Julia Worthington was crowned Queen. The major prize, a loving cup, was awarded the Bedford firemen's band for the organization making the best appearance in the parade.

Petersburg, Va., Oct. 31. (Special). The annual Halloween festivities given here tonight were participated in by thousands of revellers and the crowd was the largest seen in Petersburg for years. A large portion of the business district had been roped off and within this area the masqueraders had full sway.

The costumes were both unique and comical and handsome prizes were awarded. During the evening there was a parade of masqueraders the column being headed by a band of music.

The celebration at Hopewell was a most spectacular one. From a large reviewing stand the judges reviewed the crowd and subsequently awarded the prizes for the best display of costumes.

Big Gas Well Drilled In Raleigh County

Special to The Washington Post.

Beckley, W. Va., Oct. 31.—The largest gas well ever discovered in Raleigh County was brought in this week near Slab Fork by the Godfrey L. Cabot Co., Inc., of Boston. It is producing at the rate of 3,250,000 cubic feet daily.

The Cabot company drilled a well recently near Mabscott without encountering gas and also got a dry hole at Cirtsville. It now plans to drill several additional wells in the vicinity of the strike. The company supplies natural gas to Mount Hope, Fayetteville, Oak Hill and Charleston.

Making Dollars Grow

A dollar in the bank is one dollar—but a dollar in circulation is multiplied an average of two hundred times . . . It supports two hundred dollars worth of business activity! $4,100,000,000 worth of currency did $800,000,000,000 worth of business in 1920! . . . Put an extra dollar into circulation today and vision it buying $200 worth of merchandise. Translate it into terms of employment and multiply it by the thousands of Post readers—how long would it take to end all talk of business depression and of unemployment? . . . Every person should save a just proportion of his income, but when he seeks to increase that proportion beyond reasonable bounds he is upsetting the economic balance with results that will eventually react against him.

FOUR TICKETS WAIT VOTERS IN COUNTY

Two Old Parties, Coalitionists and Enforcement Body Move in Prince Georges.

DIVORCE SUIT IS FILED

Not until the votes are counted and added early next Wednesday morning will the actual influence exerted by the Taxpayers League of Prince Georges County in the election be known. Leaders of the old parties are not afraid of the Independent Taxpayers and their two associated bodies, but the rank and file of both Democrats and Republicans attach more weight to the coalitionists.

One of the Democrats said yesterday that the voters, knowing the genesis of the independents, would not take them seriously. On the other hand, a voter of spaulding District said that the support of the three parties would change from 40 to 50 votes in that section. Many recent elections have been won or lost in the county by counts far smaller than that. Spaulding, incidentally, is probably the stronghold of the independents.

The Democrat, speaking of the origin of the coalition, said that two men, unsuccessful in the Democratic primaries, are active in the coalition. Charges that bosses control the party is a mere political smoke screen, making a hideous spook of the harmless and necessary State central committee for the county, he said. The central committee was elected by the same men who attack it, for the purpose of directing the party. These men, he continued, were glad enough to have the support of the committee when they ran for office before on the Democratic ticket.

In the meantime there are other developments which may or may not mean a weakening of the coalition. Originally, the independent group consisted of the taxpayers' body, with J. Frank Lillard at the head, and Peter Hagan as secretary. Pinkney Magruder and Thomas Miller are now members of this body.

Then it was suggested that a committee from Lillard's group meet with the Municipal Officers Associations and that the two of them choose a ticket, to be made of members of both parties. This was done, but the strong political affiliations of some members of the municipal officers made it impossible to choose a ticket in open meeting.

Finally a committee of three from both bodies met, with a third delegation from the Law Enforcement League of the county. The Law Enforcers, primarily a dry group, sent three of their members upon invitation of the other organizations. The three delegations met behind closed doors, and it is commonly reported that two meetings were necessary before a ticket satisfactory to all could be agreed upon.

Supposedly, the Law Enforcement League was in full accord with the ticket chosen, though it was known that some members of the Municipal Officers group were heartily against it. But the Law Enforcement League has now come out with a ticket of its own choosing.

Primarily, of course, the Law Enforcement League wants the prohibition law, particularly, enforced, while the two other bodies are looking first to lower taxes and a reorganization of the Suburban Sanitary Commission.

After more than 20 years of married life, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth White has asked the Prince Georges County Circuit Court to give her a divorce from John C. White, of Riverdale. The woman, charging desertion, asks the custody of the six children of the union.

She also asks that the court force her husband to pay her a share of the sum awarded by a Washington jury for the death of another child of the couple. The jury gave the family damages of about $4,000 in the death of a daughter in an automobile crash and the money was paid to the man. She has not had a share of it, she says.

In her motion, Mrs. White says that White abandoned her in October, 1928, and has not contributed to her support nor the support of the children since August, 1929, with one exception. He did give them $15 at one time since that date, she says. He has also refused to pay bills contracted by her for food and clothing for the children.

A limited decree is all that is requested by the woman, who wants White forced to pay her an allowance. S. Marvin Peach appears as attorney for Mrs. White.

County police court, sitting in Upper Marlboro yesterday, held Robert Jackson for the grand jury on a charge of housebreaking. The man's bond was set at $500, and he was sent to jail in default.

Jackson is accused of breaking into the home of Walter Miller, on the Fort Foote road, and stealing a small quantity of goods. He was arrested by County Policeman C. W. Perrigo.

The inquest scheduled to have been held yesterday in the death of Weaver Davis, who was apparently killed by a hit-and-run driver last Sunday night, has been postponed again until next Friday. It is understood that police are not satisfied with the hit-run theory, and County Policeman Frank Prince has been working on the case all week.

GODDARD TO FINISH TESTS WITH BULLETS

test shots fired in the presence of the jury on Tuesday. Rather than impose any further hardship on the jury the case was rested.

Goddard Firm in Belief.

In spite of the verdict, however, Col. Goddard clings to his belief that the science is unerring. To substantiate this conviction he will continue with his tests at the Bureau of Standards. When he has completed them he will demonstrate in the presence of newspapermen and before the court clerks, who, alone, will know whether he is correct or in error, that the science he represents is exact.

In an examination of one bullet Col. Goddard has taken days to arrive at a decision. It was announced that Col. Goddard intends to take his time in examining the test bullets, fully cognizant of the importance of the tests, in that they will either establish the study as exact or cast it aside as a mere speculative theory.

Col. Goddard offered in court to take any number of bullets and tell which bullets came from the same gun and which guns fired the same bullets.

He will continue in his tests and has given no indication as to when they will be completed. They may take a few days and perhaps more than a week, he said.

Court Clerk Marked Slugs.

Court Clerk Wesley Gardner, who fired the bullets, knows what marks he placed on the bullets ejected from each pistol.

It has been announced that Col. Goddard's demonstration, to be made at the conclusion of his examinations, will be made in the presence of Mr. Gardner, who will determine whether Col. Goddard is right.

It is conceded on all sides that the accuracy of his examination will have much to do in determining the future of the science, irrespective of the verdict of the jury in acquitting Campbell.

WATSON SEES CHAOS IF DEMOCRATS WIN

Takes Cox to Task on His Promise That Tariff Would Be Repealed.

HITS BACK AT RASKOB

Chicago, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, Republican floor leader th the Senate, told a Nation-wide radio audience tonight that "no man could even begin to describe the appalling conditions that inevitably would come to pass" if a Democratic Congress were to be elected next Tuesday.

Senator Watson quoted from a recent radio speech of former Gov. James M. Cox, of Ohio, in which the latter said "if the House and Senate are Democratic, the existing tariff law will be repealed without hearings or any other ceremony."

Immediate repeal of the existing tariff law, Senator Watson said, would leave the country without any tariff law whatever and throw the entire business of the Nation into "utter chaos." A new law could be rushed through the House, he pointed out, but it could be held up indefinitely in the Senate, where debate is unlimited.

Sees Year's Uncertainty.

"And it is worthy of thought, too, that the present Republican House will remain in authority until the 4th of next March," Senator Watson continued, "that it would not be possible even to begin the consideration of a proposition to repeal the present law before December, 1931, and that if a Democratic Congress be elected next Tuesday, pledged to repeal the tariff when it comes into power, the business of the country would simply be paralyzed throughout the intervening period, uncertainty like a black pall would cover every industrial institution in the land."

The floor leader also quoted from radio speeches by John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, and former Gov Al Smith, and said a joint debate appeared to be in progress between them as Raskob saw prosperity on the way while Gov. Smith saw nothing but gloom continuing for an indefinite period.

"I have great respect for Gov. Smith as a man, as a politician, but while listening to his speech over the radio, I could not resist the thought that so forceful and aggressive a man should be looking after the mudd'ed and demoralized conditions in his own State, right under his own nose and in his own organization, rather than trying to clean up an impossible situation in the entire country," the Indianan said. "Gov. Smith is still a sachem in and of Tammany Hall."

Depression Is Democratic Hope.

The existing depression, Senator Watson said, was the sole basis for any hope for Democratic victory. "And yet, Gov. Smith frankly admits that our party is in no wise responsible for this situation, a situation out of which and because of which they expect to carry the country."

"We started out to accomplish a great purpose in 1928," he continued, "and have but begun the task. We shall never be able to complete it if voted out of power in Congress next Tuesday, but we shall finish it to the satisfaction of the people if given authority to do so.

"The breaks have all been against Herbert Hoover. No peace-time President has ever confronted such uncertain, such tumultous conditions, and yet I submit in all candor and good faith that he has dealt just as speedily and just as wisely with each one of them as was possible for any man to do under the circumstances."

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

THE Republicans are of the opinion that these are no times to nurture enmities, so they have made up with Perry W. Howard, Negro national committeeman from Mississippi, one of those whom President Hoover read out of patronage recognition shortly after he assumed office.

Let's see: There was Perry, Ben Davis, Negro boss in Georgia and one or two others whom Mr. Hoover said had been bartering patronage and must go.

I have not heard much from Perry since then. He continued to be national committeeman because only the national committee or the State committee can oust him from that position. But he was denied patronage recognition.

* * * *

NOW Perry, who was quite down in the mouth for awhile, has his shoulders to the wheel and is campaigning through Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Massachusetts in an effort to hold the Negro voters, supposed to be restless because of the Judge Parker appointment, in line.

I don't know just what arrangement has been made with him. But, of course, Perry is not an independent like Senator Borah who goes and comes in a campaign as he pleases. Perry is working for the national command here.

* * * *

IT is doubtful, though, if any promises of patronage recognition have been made to him, or having been made, that Perry seriously entertains them. Because Mr. Hoover has said very definitely that that can not be.

It may be some sort of a proposition that was made to Ben Davis several months ago.

The political chieftains here told Ben that he must realize that Mr. Hoover's orders must be obeyed and that there was no way they could extend him patronage recognition.

* * * *

BUT they couldn't understand, they told him, why he didn't realize the situation, see it in its true light and cooperate with them.

Now, while Mr. Hoover had terminated his usefulness as a patronage boss in Georgia, it was pointed out, maybe he would like a job as a Republican lecturer at $6,000 a year. Davis, stubborn human being, refused the offer.

Maybe something like this is the arrangement with Perry. Anyway, he has been taken back into the fold and bygones are bygones. And he is out on the stump.

CLOSE RACE FOR SENATE IS FORECAST IN DELAWARE

just a little family affair it is impossible to check up on the exact outcome.

Support Assured Bayard.

Anyway, when the delegates subsequently went down to Dover to the convention, Raskob and the Du Ponts were there. A secret ballot was taken, no delegate knowing how his fellow voted, and from this proceeding Mr. Bayard evolved as the nominee.

It disappointed Marvel, but he was quick to assure Bayard that one must expect such things in the game and that he was wholeheartedly back of him.

The little convention and the little primary and the outcome were all so intriguing and fairylike that the Nye committee ran up here on weekend in an effort to develop the story. All that was developed was that $40,000 was spent in Bayard's "primary" campaign in which only 21,000 votes were involved.

The committee left the story there but quite likely it would have returned. But lo and behold! the next day Marvel fell dead.

Now a lot of Democrats, even some wet ones, are going around saying that it was all right for Raskob and Pierre S. and Irenee to stir up the wet and dry issues but that they should not have sent old Joe Marvel to his grave. Of course, what they mean is that his disappointment brought on his death. You would be surprised at the extent of the feeling that Old Joe, after his long years of service, did not get a square deal.

Of course, the drys of the State are saying it just shows one how far the wets will go.

Wet And Dry Issue.

And, in spite of the optimism of Raskob and the two Du Pont wets it is believed that there are more drys in Delaware than wets. Wilmington is wet and so is some of the "country club" section of Kent County, but in both Kent and Sussex Counties there is believed to be a preponderance of apple jack drys. Methodism is strong in these two counties, too, and it is pretty difficult for a Raskob to make any inroads in it.

The fact that Marvel beat or came close to beating Bayard in a wet and dry primary fight would show how even the Democrats themselves are divided on this question.

Of course, Hastings will suffer from disaffection caused by the depression and also will lose some Republican wets who will follow the two Du Ponts and Raskob in support of Bayard. It is questionable though as to whether he will not pick up more Democratic drys than his losses among Republican wets.

Record of Hastings.

In addition to the man being unique in that he is a Republican bidding fair to pull through the storm, he is the only candidate that I have found who will get any benefit from the tariff. I am not trying to start any controversy on the merits of the tariff, but it is an admitted fact that it was enacted so recently that there has not been time for its reputed benefits to be felt politically. The fact that they have not had time to operate is what the Republicans, insisting they will be beneficial later, are up against.

But Hastings, in the easy way in which he has of working about the Senate, got an increased rate on leather. As a result a leather factory here that had been closed down opened up and put 1,000 men to work. There are 1,000 votes for him at least, and not only that, but one gets the impression that the manufacturing heads here are impressing upon their workers the necessity of standing by Hastings.

There was considerable opposition to him among the Negro voters because of his vote to confirm Judge Parker, but some outside Negro workers have been sent in and report they have them all in line.

Danville Appraisal Cuts Taxes $50,000

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Oct. 31.—The reduction in the city real estate appraisal just completed by the assessors will deprive Danville of $50,000 in tax income, according to statistics prepared by Commissioner of the Revenue P. G. Ragland for the city council.

The city's gross income is estimated at $1,200,000 against $1,250,000 last year. All of this will be absorbed by the fixed charges of running the city and all public improvements will have to be financed by bond issues, it is said.

the purchaser of liquor equally guilty with the seller under the Volstead act and the Jones "five and ten" law.

The placing of an undercover man in the Senate Office Building was generally considered as the climax of the Government's efforts to enforce prohibition legislation. Members of Congress have always been jealous of their constitutional immunity from arrest while going to or from sessions of the House and Senate and have claimed the right to complete freedom of their office quarters without surveillance from other branches of the Government.

FOURTH-TERM ISSUE LEADS IN MARYLAND

Republicans Assert Ritchie Will Be Virtual King if Elected.

BOTH CLAIM ADVANTAGE

but he also will lead him in the counties. Here Maj. E. Brooke Lee, Democratic leader of Montgomery County and now the Democratic campaign manager for the State, steps in to corroborate Tydings.

Granting that there are a lot of Republicans in Montgomery County, granting that there is a serious division in the Democratic party in that county—granting these and other things, Maj. Lee nevertheless insists that the county will go for Gov. Ritchie, and by a minimum majority of 3,000 votes.

There are a number of issues in the campaign. One of them is prohibition. Ritchie is a wet and says so; Broening used to be wet, but now is silent on the question. This, say the Democrats, makes him a hypocrite. Then there is the celebrated road commission scandal—the theft of $376,000 from the commission's revolving fund by employes of the Ritchie administration.

Succession is Main Issue.

But the big issue is bassed upon a fourth team. Always the Republican orators harp on this. Never before they say, has a man served more than one team as governor of Maryland. And now, they shout, here is one who wants to serve a fourth term—to be king.

The State constitution of 1864 contained a provision that prohibited more than one term for the governor. But in 1867 this was stricken out. In its place, or rather, in the bill of rights, there was inserted a paragraph to the effect that long and continued service in executive offices was dangerous to liberty, and that rotation in office was eo be preferred.

A member of the constitutional convention that adopted that language, by the way, was Judge Albert Ritchie, the governor's father.

Carelessness Charged.

The Republicans say that Gov. Ritchie's long service in office has resulted in carelessness, and they cite the road commission scandal as an example.

The Democrats first point out that the language in the bill of rights about long service is nota restraining statute, but merely an academic theory. That it is unsound in Ritchie's case, they say, has been proved by the benefits that have accrued to the State as a result of Ritchie's second and third terms. Now, they say, the State needs Ritchie so that he can continue to give it his best brand of good government.

As for his continuance in office being dangerous to individual liberty, they say, no man ever lived who was more anxious to preserve individual liberty than is Albert Ritchie, and to substantiate this they point to his ceaseless fight for State's rights.

Hard Working Executive.

Gov. Ritchie is without doubt the hardest working executive Maryland has ever had. Newspaper men who have covered his office say that he frequently works until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. If an irate taxpayer writes in to complain about something, Ritchie will sit down and write him an exhaustive reply in his own hand.

He gets his looks, they say, from his mother, who was Elizabeth Cabell, of Richmond, Va. In Civil War days "Lizzie" Cabell was adjudged one of the three most beautiful belles in the Southland. She now lives at the governor's mansion with her son, who is not married.

Mayor Broening, a self-made man, is one of the best vote-getters the Republican party in Maryland has ever had. He has proved this by carrying the city four times—twice in a race for State's attorney and twice in a race for mayor. In this connection, however, the Democrats point out that in the years that Broening won the Democratic party was split by factional strife.

Broening Effective Orator.

Be that as it may, there is no question about Broening having political "it." In a way, he reminds you of Secretary of Labor Jim Davis. A joiner, he belongs to every lodge or fraternity it is possible for him to belong o, and to this fact he owes much of his success. Also he is an effective orator. One of his friends says that he actually saw him move an audience to tears once discussing a taxation matter.

A year or so ago he did a thing that brought him world-wide publicity, and gave Henry Mencken and the other intelligentsia stitches.

Shipwreck Kelly came here to give an exhibition of flag-pole sitting. Afterward a kid here set ou to break his record. When the youngster succeeded, Broening wrote him a letter praising him for his exploit and saying that he eypified the "early pioneer spirit of America."

And that is why the Democrats now answer the taunt of "King" Ritchie with the cry of "Pole Sitter" Broening.

U. S. Detention Station In Maryland to Be Idle

Announcement was made yesterday from the Department of Justice that the Director of the Bureau of Prisons has decided to make no further plans toward utilization of the immigration detention station near Fort McHenry, Md., as a Federal jail.

The statement declared that residents of Maryland have objected to such a use for the building which is close to the Francis Scott Key monument and that several offices, now using portions of the building, would have to be moved at considerable cost, before it could be adapted for jail purposes.

NORRIS' POSSESSION OF LETTER IS ISSUE

Power Man Says It Was Written to Him, but That He Never Got It.

POSTAL INQUIRY ASKED

Omaha, Nebr., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—The Postoffice Department was drawn today into Senator George W. Norris' campaign for reelection. Thorne Browne, Nebraska director of the National Electric Light Association, asked postal inspectors to investigate the manner in which a letter written to him by J. B. Wootan, of Chicago, came into Senator Norris' possession.

The letter was read by the senator, opposed by former Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, in an address last night at Blair.

Wootan is editor of the Public Service Magazine.

The contents of the letter, it was revealed, concerned "wire tapping" abuses against Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the Senate campaign funds committee.

Never Got It, Says Browne.

"How did Senator Norris come into possession of the letter?" Browne demanded of the postal authorities. "Wootan told me he sent the letter. The letter never arrived at my office. The senator has it. Some place between the office building in Chicago and my office in Lincoln (Nebr.) that letter was abstracted by some one."

Senator Norris said:

"I would be glad to have them investigate. Their conclusion that some one tapped the mails was just as silly as their conclusion that Senator Nye's aids tapped telephone wires.

"It is not so much a question of whether Browne got the letter as it is whether Wootan wrote it, and that is admitted. It (the letter) is evidence that power trust magazines and publications, as well as officials, are trying to defeat me. It also shows that this cry that they are not in politics and not interested in senatorial campaigns is absolutely untrue."

Text of Letter.

The senator said when the letter came to him it looked as if some one had read it, torn it up, and thrown it in a waste basket."

In part, the letter as exhibited to newspapermen by Senator Norris read:

"Our mutual friend, Arthur Huntington, of Cedar Rapids, has just been in my office and given me a most interesting bit of news and I want to know from you if you think it would justify me in running out to Nebraska and getting this matter first hand in such shape, if possible, as to enable us to publish it.

"The thing is this: Huntington says that either Senator Nye or one of his confederates in the snooping business demanded at one of the hotels in Lincoln the privilege of tapping such telephone wires in the hotel as he might desire and doing this in the name of the United States Government.

"The manager of the hotel is reported to have replied that he would be willing to have this done providing Nye or his confederates would bring mandamus suit to compel him to do it, whereupon the matter was dropped, and Nye was out of town in five hours. If this thing can be verified as to make it safe for publication, it seems to me it ought to be done.

"Meantime, has Hitchcock any chance whatever of beating Norris? I wish I could think so, but from all information I have been able to gather, it looks dubious.

"I am, with kind regards,

"Yours truly,

ILLNESS STRIKES MAYOR OF CHICAGO

mained true to the candidacy of Mrs. McCormick.

From his office Mayor Thompson dictated pungent statements assailing Mrs. McCormick. He was heartened last Saturday by a Supreme Court decision absolving him of blame for exorbitant fees paid real estate experts during his regime, a citizen's suit begun by the Chicago Tribune that had hung a million-dollar judgment over his head.

Today he was to make his dramatic return to the hustings, a sort of "homecoming" to the political battle ground.

A crowd awaited his coming. There was no "Big Bill" on the platform, no cowboy hat waving at them in the familiar way.

A spokesman arose and made the brief announcement. Mayor Thompson, protesting his doctors' orders, had been carried on a stretcher to an ambulance and rushed to Passavant Hospital. Three surgeons at the moment were operating upon their patient.

Two hours later, the mayor's condition was pronounced satisfactory but the attendants said they could not predict the outcome for 48 hours.

Robert C. Layman, Mayor Thompson's secretary, said he returned to consciousness and conversed with him. Mrs. Thompson, long in delicate health and prostrated recently when she was robbed of her jewelry at the door of her apartment, fainted at the hospital today but regained composure after the bulletin from the operating room was read to her.

Mayor Thompson's prepared address was read to the theater audience. It comprised an attack on Mrs. McCormick and on the Chicago Tribune, his traditional foe.

Woman Reformer Taken to New York

Will Leave Her Two Small Daughters With Friend in Baltimore.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 31.—Mrs. Agnes M. Walker, erstwhile political and social reformer arrested yesterday after an exciting automobile chase through congested streets on a New York bench warrant, alleging robbery with "force of arms" of $300 from Edward Irving Valentic in February, 1926, was taken to New York today by two local officers. They went by automobile.

Mrs. Walker obtained permission to stop with the officers in Baltimore to leave her two young daughters with Mrs. Florence R. Riordan, who, she said, was the mother of the late Van Lear Black, and that Mrs. Riordan had consented to keep the girls pending their mother's indefinite return.

Mrs. Walker reiterated she was "being framed" by her mother Mrs. Agnes Murphy Mulligan, for refusing to relinquish certain rights in the estate of her father, the late William G. Mulligan, prominent lawyer and real estate developer of Palisade, N. J., who died in August. The estate is valued in excess of $1,000,000.

Carnegie Medals Given Virginians

Father of Youth Who Died in Rescue Attempt to Get One Award.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Two awards to residents of Virginia were announced by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission today. A bronze medal was ordered sent to Charles E. Willis, 707 Colonial avenue, Richmond, Va., father of Francis MacLeod Willis, 21, who died at Rockport, Ontario, June 16, 1928, in attempting to save a boy from drowning. A similar medal was awarded Clinton E. Smith, 54, a railroad telegrapher, of Greenville, Va., who saved Mary S. Humphries, 70, from being killed by a train at Vesuvius, Va., July 23, 1929.

Young Willis died attempting to save Richard R. MacSherry, 10, from drowning in the St. Lawrence River after the boy had fallen into the stream from a barge. Despite the strong current, Willis leaped into the stream fully clothed. The boy, however, climbed upon his shoulder, forcing him beneath the surface and causing his death. The boy was finally rescued by Harry Packer Wilbur, jr., 24, of New Bedford, Mass.

Seeing Mrs. Humphries step into the path of an approaching train, Smith raced the train to her, braced his foot against the rail and pulled her from the track just as the train passed, brushing his clothing.

GOVERNMENT PLANS BILLION IN BUILDING

Program Will Be Pushed to Relieve Jobless as Soon as Possible.

NAVY DEPARTMENT AIDS

(Associated Press.)

Concentrating on its efforts to lead the country to a solution of the unemployment problem, the Federal Government announced yesterday its current construction projects would cost approximately $1,000,000,000.

Contracts under way and pending aggregate $938,416,000, it was disclosed at the White House. Already the building program, including public works, naval and military construction, and ships built through Shipping Board loans, totals $567,736,000. Other contracts to be let as soon as possible aggregate $370,660,000.

These projects are exclusive of the $10,000,000 naval and military aircraft contracts. Although the program was provided for at the last session of Congress, instructions were issued to all departments to expedite their plans in order to relieve as many jobless as possible.

Employment at 1,033,000.

As a result of the construction programs, employment directly attributable to Government work was placed at 1,033,000 persons on October 1, as compared with 990,000 persons last January. However, this figure includes all Army, Navy, and Coast Guard personnel, as well as those in the civil service. It does not, however, include those making Government supplies.

As reports were received by Chairman Woods, of the President's emergency committee for employment, telling of the progress in industrial areas toward finding employment for the jobless and keeping other employes busy under the stagger plan, the Interstate Commerce Commission set aside for the first time its regulations on railroad accounting.

The action will permit the Chicago and Northwestern Railway to use $500,000 in Chicago and other Northwestern cities in employing 1,700 of its former mechanics and shopmen during November and December to repair locomotives and rolling stock. The expenditures for labor are to be charged to the company's suspense accounts.

Sewell Avery Made Director.

Chairman Woods appointed Sewell Avery, of Chicago, as director of the committee's work with the industries between New York and Chicago.

The Navy Department broadened its efforts toward the employment problem by announcing it would institute a $14,000,000 public works and utilities program this winter. It previously had made known through the emergency committee that construction amounting to nearly $6,500,000 would get under way at Navy posts before January 1.

The monthly survey of business by the American Federation of Labor said temporary measures for relief were of assistance, but that unless provision for security of employment and income were made "we shall again be forced to meet unemployment crises."

The review said the number of unemployed in Europe was increasing.

"In Great Britain the number out of work has risen slightly to 2,176,191 on October 6, the highest point since 1921," it added. "German unemployment at the end of September passed the 3,000,000 mark for the first time in the present crises. Italy has 350,000 out of work and 162,360 employed on public construction."

Hines Denies Hospital Site Has Been Chosen

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Oct. 31.—Denial by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the United States Veterans' Bureau in Washington, of an article published today in a Fairmont newspaper on the West Virginia Federal Veterans' Hospital was telephoned here this afternoon from the Capital.

The article stated that a Huntington site had been chosen and the land purchased, but Gen. Hines said this was false as the board had not even met following the rehearing in the case, at which protests were made by various delegations against the original selection of Huntington as the site. He explained that the board was awaiting the submission of briefs before taking final action.

Havana Will Become Government District

Havana, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Havana, one of the oldest cities in the New World, is to lose its municipal identity to become a federal district much like the District of Columbia. Already following closely the pattern of government in the United States, Cuba on February 24, 1931, will lend new emphasis to the parallel.

Legislation for abolition of the municipality and the creation in its place of a federal or central district was adopted by the Cuban Congress May 20, 1928, at the same time that a number of other amendments to the constitution were enacted.

Cuba, since the inauguration in 1925 of Machado administration, has been striving to bring Havana to greater international prominence through creation here of a sort of New World Hague for the adjudiction of Pan-American affairs, and it was with this program in mind that Congress favored legislation placing control of the city under federal authority.

SECRETARY HYDE HIT IN ADDRESSE BY REED

Curtis and Mellon Are Also Attacked by Former Missouri Senator.

ADVICE ON WHEAT CITED

Benton, Mo., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—"The three great protagonists of the Hoover arministration are Curtis, Mellon and Hyde, but the loudest and most noisome of these is Arthur," former Senator James A. Reed said in an address before a Democratic gathering here tonight.

"Ordinarily," he said, "it would be a waste of time to take notice of his (Hyde's) meanderings; a debate of governmental policies with Hyde is necessarily fruitless. One gains nothing by a debate with an intellectual ulcer. But Hyde is a member of the Cabinet and as the voice of the Hoover administration 'crying in the wilderness'—hence not because of the man, but because of the master I invite your attention to a few Hydeisms.

"He was introduced the other night as the next President of the United States. That was not astonishing because Hoover may exclaim as did Louis XV, 'after me the deluge.'"

Mr. Hyde, Mr. Reed said, is telling the farmers how much corn and how much wheat they may raise.

"If it were possible," Mr. Reed continued, "to impose upon the American farmer the will of a man who never plowed a field in all his life and to allow that man to dictate to the farmer what he can raise and how he shall raise it, the farmer will be reduced to the condition of the Russian peasant under Bolshevik rule, for that is exactly what they are trying to do in Russia—to regulate not only the farmer but all classes of labor, to put human being under governmental control."

"Hyde's scheme, Mr. Reed said, "is utterly impractical."

"Mellon, Curtis, and Hyde tell us that the present desperate state of our country is due entirely to world conditions. That is a new doctrine to come from the lips of the Republican politicians. The sole and only stock argument of the Republican party for the last 40 years has been that it is the producer of prosperity. If it is capable of producing prosperity and has permitted the present lamentable condition to arise, then it is a criminal of the blackest character. If it has no control over financial and economic conditions, then it has perpetarted a 40-year-old fraud upon the American people and has gained and kept office by false pretenses."

McBride Demands Hearing in Capital

Man Held on Check Charge Will Be Arraigned Today.

An extradition hearing for Emmett McBride, brother of F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-saloon League, who is wanted in Ohio on a bad check charge, is scheduled for today before Chief Justice Wheat in District of Columbia Supreme Court.

The hearing was scheduled for yesterday afternoon, but, due to the fact that the chief justice was engaged in the Court of Appeals during the day on matters relating to cases in which he sat for Associate Justice Charles H. Robb, the case was continued.

When McBride was brought into the court yesterday morning it was understood that he had waived extradition and was willing to return to Ohio. Later it developed that Sheriff John G. Kempthorne, of Carroiton County, Ohio, refused to take the man back to Ohio without extradition process. Then Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray prepared extradition papers, but McBride demanded a hearing.

Sheriff Kempthorne told newspapermen that he would take McBride back to Ohio handcuffed if the chief justice issues the writ.

Trachtenberg, Pleading Guilty, Fined in Assault

Aaron Trachtenberg, tire dealer with a shop on Pennsylvania avenue, pleaded guilty and was fined $50 in Police Court yesterday on a charge of assaulting Private V. V. Vaughn September 10.

The assault charge was placed against Trachtenberg, when in company with William L. Osborne he is said to have argued with Vaughn over a parking ticket. A fight issued, and Vaughn shot Osborne after the latter is alleged to have fractured the policeman's skull with a whisky bottle. Osborne has been indicted on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Production Program Urged To Save Homes of America

Fit Output to Goods Used, Advises Family Committee, to Safeguard Child Life and Eliminate Objectionable Features of Cities.

(Associated Press.)

To save a threatened American home, Dr. Louise Stanley, chairman of the committee on the family, advocated a national production program based on national consumption needs in her report for the coming White House child conference.

Chief of the Federal Home Economics Bureau, Dr. Stanley granted that statistics on marriage, divorce and proportion of births to population, now seem to indicate family disintegration. But she found family life worth saving.

Machine-equipped industry, her committee discovered, had invented elaborate procedures for housekeeping and created new wants with a multiplicity of products. The home researchers saw, keeping pace with this trend, increased urbanization, growth of apartments and flats, less space per person, less privacy, less family entertaining, more dependence on outside amusements, fewer children and the cost of a child increased.

Fitting production to goods used, the committee held, would stabilize the market, obviate the unemployment and migration "which give to urban family life its most objectionable features," enable the worker to establish a permanent home and give to the child family security.

Dr. Stanley's committee placed the official stamp of approval on the wife and mother working outside the home, "if she can earn enough to pay for the goods or services she would produce in the home and get more enjoyment in this outside work."

It also nodded at the homemaker buying food prepared outside the home, provided she knew its quality and composition.

The committee found: Marriage earlier, families larger, in manufacturing centers; percentage of married population increasing as the size of the community decreases; size of family decreasing as size of community increases; illegitimate births increasing with size of community; divorces increasing with size of community; more childless couples in cities; city families moving more frequently than rural families.

Baltimore Fails To Get Gangster

Chicago Court Sets Free "Fur" Sammons, Pay Roll Robbery Suspect.

Chicago, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—James "Fur" Sammons, wanted in Baltimore on a payroll robbery charge, went free from Judge Joseph B. David's court here today after the judge had termed the Cook County prosecutor's case against him "a joke."

Sammons was accused of assault with intent to murder, carrying concealed weapons and driving while intoxicated, the result of a recent automobile collision. Judge David found the evidence insufficient.

As he walked from the court room, Sammons was rearrested and taken to the State's attorney's office for questioning about the gangster's connection with the shotgun attack yesterday on Sergt. James McBride, of the Bellwood police. McBride, severely wounded, is a witness against "Three-Fingered Jack" White in a coming murder trial. Sammons was found in White's sister's home late yesterday.

Exiled Maharajah Waits Second Heir

Wife of Indore Ruler Was Nancy Anne Miller, of Seattle.

St. Germain-en-Laye, France, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—The Chateau d'Hennemont here, residence of the former Maharajah of Indore and his American wife, who was Nancy Anne Miller, of Seattle, is hustling with preparations for the birth of a baby soon.

Sir Tukoji Rao Holkar, abdicated maharajah, is hopeful the small newcomer will be a son and heir for his great Indian and European estates. His wife already has presented to him a daughter, Princess Sharada Raje, born about two years ago at the chateau.

The former maharajah and his wife returned from a long visit to India in August. Most of their time was spent in the prince's palace at Baroda, in the State of Indore, scene of the spectacular Mumtas Begum affair, which resulted in the maharajah's renunciation of his throne. Mumtas Begum was a native dancing girl, on whom a kidnaping attempt was made. Her wealthy protector, Mr. Bawla, was murdered.

With the promise of cooperation of the Arlington County board of supervisors, the joint committee of citizens and members of the town council of Falls Church have decided to circulate a petition among the freehold property owners within the corporate limits at once. This petition must be signed by at least one-fourth of the property holders. It will ask for a bond issue election for laying a water system throughout the town. It also contains a statement from the signers as to whether or not they will become water subscribers. As soon as it is possible to estimate the cost of installing a system an election will be called to vote on the proposed bond issue.

The engineering problems in connection with the installation of a water system in all portions of the town are now being considered, the details as to distribution of water from the District of Columbia by the way of the Arlington County mains are being worked out. The most important problem before the subcommittee of the joint committee is whether the present pressure of the water as delivered by Arlington County would be sufficient to carry the water all over the town or whether the loss in pressure due to the difference of elevation in the various sections will necessitate the construction of an auxiliary pumping station and reservoir within the town limits.

The joint committee realizes that the responsibility of solving the engineering problems lies primarily with the town authorities, as Arlington County is only called on to sell water to them, but realizing the ability and experience of Arlington County Engineer C. L. Kinnier, they plan to consult with his department.

The Pioneer Grange will give a Halloween dance tonight in the Grange Hall at Masonville, on the Falls Church-Annandale road. Prizes will be given for the best costume and a prize waltz will be staged. Paul Johnson has been named chairman of the committee on arrangements, assisted by Miss Alma Besley and Mrs. Martin T. Webb.

The Virginia Public Service Co. will give a demonstration and short entertainment program tonight in the Pohick Hall for the benefit of the annual Pohick Sunday School Christmas tree.

The American War Mothers of Falls Church will act as hostesses at an entertainment this afternoon in Falls Church for the wounded war veterans from the Mount Alto Hospital in Washington. The chapter will furnish refreshments.

The Women's Bible class of the Columbia Baptist Church at Falls Church, which met at the home of Mrs. Guy Ervin, on Broad street, elected Mrs. E. T. Penwick as president. Mrs. Ervin was elected vice president; Mrs. R. C. Bleadner, second vice president; Mrs. Tyler Moffett, honorary vice president; Miss Hattie Elgin, secretary; Mrs. Walter Renn, assistant secretary, and Mrs. C. A. Berger, treasurer. Mrs. Ervin, who has been teacher of the class for the past five years, submitted her resignation, as she has accepted presidency of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. She was presented with a large bouquet of chrysanthemums by Mrs. Penwick on behalf of the class, in appreciation of her work in the interest of the class. Mrs. George Hawxhurst was elected teacher to succeed Mrs. Ervin, with Mrs. J. L. McCutcheon as assistant teacher.

Fire caused by a defective and overheated furnace threatened to destroy the home of M. F. Moses, on Great Falls street in Falls Church, yesterday afternoon. The Falls Church firemen, led by Chief E. M. Ward, responded to the alarm, and for some time fought a stubborn blaze which was burning between the walls inside the house. Mrs. Moses had been away earlier in the day and had returned home and stirred up the furnace, which soon became overheated and set fire to the house. Because of the shortage of water in the town, firemen resorted to the use of chemicals to bring the fire under control. The damage was estimated at about $300.

The Williams store was completely destroyed, with its contents. The loss has been placed at $20,000.

ORPHANAGE OWES TREASURER, CLAIM

Second Auditor-Witness Is Heard in Embezzling Trial in Richmond.

FIRST MAN FOR DEFENSE

Richmond, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—An auditor testified in court here today that not only does James P. Jones, being tried for embezzlement while treasurer of the Virginia Methodist orphanage not owe the orphanage anything but that the orphanage owes Jones $24,101.52.

The testimony of the witness, J. M. Culbreth, followed closely that of F. L. Worcester, another auditor, that Jones had failed to account for more than $37,000 of orphanage funds. Jones, a member of the State Legislature, is charged with embezzlement and larceny totaling $37,976.40.

Culbreth's statement was in reply to a question by M. J. Fulton, defense attorney, as to the result of Culbreth's audit of Jones' records as treasurer of the orphanage dating to August 6, 1930.

"At the close of business on August 6, 1930, the trustees of the Virginia Conference Orphanage of the Methodist Episcopal Church South owed Mr. James P. Jones $24,101.52," the witness replied.

He explained that this amount included two settlements made by Jones with the trustees, one on July 1, 1930, in which he paid them $14,680.87, and another on August 6, in which arrangements were made for a payment to the trustees of $23,011.78. Worcester had testified that a shortage of $37,976.40 remained in spite of the settlements.

Culbreth, who said he was a certified public accountant registered in Virginia and North Carolina, was the first defense witness to testify since Jones' trial began Tuesday. He was engaged, he said, by Jones on August 12.

During Jones' incumbency as treasurer of the orphanage, from March 12, 1926, to June 17, 1930, he received a total of $1,126,172.86 in orphanage funds, Culbreth testified. During the same time, he said, Jones paid out for the orphanage $1,112,581.73, which, added to the $37,692.65 included in the two settlements, made $1,150,274.38. This, the witness said, left the orphanage owing Jones $24,101.52.

Intimidation of Federal Witnesses Laid to Man

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 31.—Lee Carroll, of Cumberland, whose wife, Ethel A. Carroll, is under bond on a liquor sale and possession charge, was held in $1,000 yesterday for Federal court by United States Commissioner Thomas J. Anderson on charges of intimidating Federal witnesses. The charges came through the Cumberland office of the Prohibition Bureau.

According to the testimony of informers, Carroll approached Mrs. Alice Frant, mother of one of the boys who informed, on the morning of October 24, and told her he was looking for her son and the other informer and made various threats of bodily harm. They had said, he declared, that they had purchased a half pint of liquor from Mrs. Carroll.

70 POLICE PATROL DANVILLE AT NIGHT

Precaution Against "Mischief" by Textile Strikers and Revelers.

FIVE HOUSES ARE STONED

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Oct. 31.—Danville was patrolled by police tonight as it never has been before, with 70 uniformed officers going on duty at 6 o'clock to cope with possible vandalism under the guise of "mischief" on Halloween. A recently enacted antimask ordinance did away with the annual parade of revelers, and many obeyed the police chief's special request that people remain in their homes.

Five instances of the stoning of houses were reported overnight, the dwellings in each instance being occupied by men and women who are working in the textile mills. Mrs. J. D. Wall was slightly injured when a soda bottle hurtling through a window struck her on the head as she slept.

G. E. Hicks told the police he expected trouble last night and took the precaution to remove an infant from its bed into another part of the house. An hour later a half brick landed in the empty crib, he said. Posie J. Hundley, Commonwealth's attorney of Pittsylvania County, said today that "if we have any more trouble with jeering crowds" he would ask for a special circuit court grand jury to indict those responsible.

Large crowds were massed in front of the Schoolfield gates early this morning, for the first time in ten days, apparently owing to circulation of a rumor that strikebreakers were being imported from North Carolina. Reports that the executive committee of the union last night considered whether or not to terminate the strike were ridiculed by W. B. Gaylord, one of the organizers, today. He said that the strikers are being fed as usual and that a carload of flour donated to the strikers had arrived from East St. Louis, Ill.

Another report, met by the traditional silence of the mill management, was to the effect that during the present idleness of the mill machinery is being revamped and altered for a new type of goods.

Samuel Marcus Dies After Illness of Week

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 31.—Samuel Marcus, of Gordonsville, one of the most widely known Jewish merchants in Piedmont Virginia, died early yesterday morning at University Hospital. The end came after a week's illness, although he had been failing gradually for more than two years, following injuries sustained in a fall.

The body was taken to Norfolk, where the interment occurred at noon today in the Hebrew cemetery, on Princess Anne road, the service being conducted by D. L. D. Mendoza, rabbi of Ohef Sholem Temple. Mr. Marcus, among others, is survived by Mrs. Louis Frankfurt, of Washington.

NO NATIONAL ISSUE.

The campaign is at an end. The country will soon know its own mind. The two big parties will take advantage of next Tuesday's referendum to bring their strategy up to date, with a view to making an early start in the great race of 1932.

No national issue is subjected to the popular test at next week's election. At one time early in the campaign it seemed that the business reversal might constitute an issue upon which the Democratic party could make national gains, by convincing the people that the Hoover administration and the Republican Congress were responsible for adversity. But when it became apparent that the whole world was affected, and that the Hoover administration was dealing with the emergency more successfully than any other government, the "issue" of adversity vanished. Gov. Al Smith and other able Democrats have shamed certain reckless party associates by candidly admitting that the Republican party is not responsible for the business depression.

The attempt to make prohibition an issue between the parties has also failed. It is an issue inside of both parties, but not between the parties. Candidates here and there will win or lose on this question, without affecting their party's national fortunes one way or the other. The eighteenth amendment will not be even remotely affected by the outcome of Tuesday's election, and dry and wet claims of gains will be mere wasted breath. The people of the United States must be moved to the depths before they will range themselves into wet and dry armies attacking and defending the eighteenth amendment. If that time should come the advantage would be on the side of the drys, because they would need to hold only one-fourth of the States in order to beat off the besiegers.

Tariff talk has been even more idle than prohibition talk in the effort to find a national issue between the two great parties. The country is committed to protection by Democratic as well as Republican votes. There is no intention on the part of the United States to abandon protection. Criticism of the new tariff law leaves the voters cold. They know that in the rough and tumble of the tariff scrimmage a perfect bill could not have been passed. The law as it stands is workable, it protects American industry, labor, and agriculture, and it does not discriminate between sections or classes. So the people have accepted the new tariff law as satisfactory. No candidate anywhere is in danger of losing because of his support of the tariff law.

After the campaign thunder has rolled away it will be seen that the campaign of 1930 was not fought on any national party issue. This being true, it may be expected that the election will not be a triumph nor a disaster for either party. Individual disasters and triumphs will loom large for a few days, but in a national sense the election probably will not be decisive of anything important. Democratic gains in the House of Representatives are looked for as a matter of course, but they will not do the Democratic party any good or the Republican party any harm. President Hoover will still be at the helm, and he will still be assailed by traitors within his party. At the last session of Congress he succeeded in obtaining most of the legislation he desired, in spite of this treason, and upon legislation already obtained he can go forward with a constructive program of public building, flexible tariff readjustment, encouragement of industry and agriculture, restriction of undesirable immigration, and other useful national policies.

Another year, at least, must roll around before it will be worth while to speculate upon the outcome of the race of 1932.

SHIPPING GOES AHEAD.

Development of the American Merchant Marine is going forward in spite of the curtailment of international trade and the world-wide slump in the shipping business. A recent survey shows that the amount of laid-up tonnage is increasing, and that the keenest competition exists between maritime interests. It is all the more important that the ship construction planned in the United States should go forward.

Foreign interests are criticizing the United States for enlarging its commercial fleet during the period of shipping depression. It is no doubt disquieting to them to find a powerful new competitor in the shipping trade, but the United States is determined to develop a merchant fleet strong enough to carry a large share of its commerce overseas. Neither the current hard times nor the protests of foreign shipping interests will interfere with its program.

In an address delivered before the Middle West Foreign Trade and Merchant Marine Conference at Indianapolis, Chairman T. V. O'Connor, of the United States Shipping Board, called attention to the fact that American shipyards are enjoying the greatest peace-time activity in their history. It is estimated that these yards will turn out vessels worth $75,000,000 during each of the next five years. Lines that have been awarded ocean mail contracts are required to construct 68 vessels at a cost of $281,000,000, most of which will be launched during that period.

Such continuous development is absolutely necessary if America is to take its rightful place on the seas. Most of the ships now operating under the American flag were originally designed for use during the war. They are becoming obsolete. They must be replaced by better and faster vessels.

To delay this work would be to forecast a long period of depression. Shipping will unquestionably regain its former momentum and new facilities will be required. It is in keeping with sound American policy to provide the ships for a greater commerce while there is a surplus of labor.

"We have no intention whatever," says Mr. O'Connor, "of permitting a passing condition to retard a movement which is prompted by considerations of national welfare and which has been so long in gathering momentum." He may be assured that the people will applaud this attitude.

BIG BANK MERGERS.

In 1928 and 1929 the bank merger movement reached major proportions. The stock market collapse of 1929 found several such projects in the formative stage. The upset in bank security prices was the primary factor that led to the abandonment of merger negotiations. Since the stock market crash the banking structure has remained fixed, but now it appears that new merger movements are getting under way.

Officers of the Manufacturers Trust Co., the Bank of the United States, the Public National Bank & Trust Co. and the International Trust Co., New York City financial houses, have entered into negotiations looking toward their consolidation. The merger, if it is consummated, will create a financial institution with deposits in excess of $700,000,000 and total resources of more than $1,000,000,000. This would not be the largest New York bank but it would exceed all others in number of branches. The Manufacturers Trust Co., as the new institution probably would be known, would operate 140 branches in addition to its four main banking houses in the five boroughs of New York City. At present the lead in number of branches is held by the Bank of Manhattan Trust Co., which operates 70.

The movement looking toward the merger had its inception in the belief, now shared by many bankers, that the modern industrial and commercial system requires banks of large resources, operating enough branches so that banking facilities may be provided directly and conveniently to the public. But if the tendency continues there is danger that banking facilities will become monopolized, especially since the "super bank" is in such a strong competitive position that it threatens to put the unit bank out of business.

The congressional inquiry into the need for amending the banking laws so as to liberalize the restrictions imposed upon national banks with respect to operation of branches, &c., will receive new impetus if the proposed New York merger goes through. As a result of the merger, other New York banks in self-defense might be forced to merge. Each and every consolidation inevitably is the forerunner of others, made necessary to meet the competition of the merged institution.

SPEED UP RETIRED PAY.

Nearly six months have elapsed since Congress enacted the law designed to liberalize the act which authorized retirement with pay to civil employes of the Government who had served for 30 years and had reached the prescribed age. Many thousands of former employes were retired under authority of the Welch act, and some of them draw a mere pittance in retirement pay. The act of last May was designed to help these people by increasing the amount paid to them, as part return for the contributions which they were compelled to make under the compulsory terms of the original retirement law. But although nearly half a year has passed, the necessity for unwinding or cutting the red tape which attaches to nearly all governmental activities has apparently prevented the adjustment of the pay of all but a very few annuitants.

The excuse given is that the Pension Office is short of the necessary clerical force to examine papers and make adjustments.

President Hoover has appointed a commission to devise means for the relief of the unemployment situation. Would it not be a bright idea for this commission to suggest to the authorities who are charged with the duty of carrying out the terms of the latest retirement act that they give temporary employment to a sufficient number of clerks to insure the prompt readjustment of retirement pay of former employes?

The suggestion is passed along to the President's committee on unemployment. Its adoption would afford relief alike to the unemployed and underpaid annuitants.

JACK GARNER'S BUGABOO.

Tax refunds are a constant source of unwarranted political propaganda. Every time the Democratic party runs short of sensational issues, Representative John N. Garner trots out some new and fantastic charges based on the administration of the income tax laws. He has never been able to substantiate his accusations, but this does not prevent him from casting further insinuations and proposing grotesque schemes to take administration of the income tax out of the hands of the Treasury.

Evidently hoping that he can sway some voters, Mr. Garner calls for a congressional investigation looking toward adjudication of all tax refunds by the courts. The proposal that the courts should administer the income tax laws would be too silly to demand attention in ordinary times, but as the election is just around the corner, Secretary Mellon takes the pains to expose Mr. Garner's "preposterous" statements.

Refunds are a natural outgrowth of the American taxation system. Taxpayers are not permitted to withhold taxes due to the Government because of any dispute as to the amount owed. The system calls for immediate payment, and adjustment later, if that is necessary. An elaborate procedure for making these adjustments has been worked out. In disputed cases the Government provides a field examination and audit by civil service employes, a review by the Bureau of Internal Revenue and a decision by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Citizens dissatisfied with the decision of Treasury officials have recourse to the Board of Tax Appeals or to the courts. All refunds of more than $75,000 must be passed upon by the congressional joint committee on internal revenue taxation, of which Mr. Garner is a member.

The Government has collected in additional taxes during the last fourteen years nearly five times as much as it has paid out in refunds. This suggests that Uncle Sam gets all that is coming to him. The fact that Jack Garner has to raise a rumpus about returning to the taxpayers what actually belongs to them indicates the dearth of real campaign issues.

The tariff certainly is a campaign issue—in the Democratic party.

THE RED FIASCO

From the New York Times.

Moscow seems to be not altogether indifferent to the sense of indignation aroused by the recent summary execution of forty-eight officials charged with practicing sabotage against the government's food-distribution program. At any rate, in connection with the arrest this week of a new group of experts, including the country's leading authority on industrial power, it is announced that the accused will be tried in public instead of being disposed of by the secret police. The increasing frequency with which arrest and punishment are being invoked against enemies of the Communist regime disguised as specialists and high-placed administrators can not be dissociated from the shortcomings revealed at the end of the second year of the five-year plan. It is no doubt very useful that a successful harvest should have come along to relieve the stringent food shortage in the cities.

But there must also be a sense of chagrin among the builders of a new industrial order in Russia in comparing the results of nature's bounty with the far less satisfactory results of their own management. At the end of the second year of the plan, basic industries like coal and steel production fell short of the scheduled percentages by something like 25 per cent. The same ratio is now shown in the supply of freight cars. They should average 65,000 cars daily, but have reached only 50,000.

Long before the inauguration of the five-year plan the Soviet government dealt with emergencies by throwing its "shock brigades" against weak sections of the "front." In the last two years the method has naturally developed. The quarterly check-up of actual results against program figures would be followed by a concentration, now on the timber front, now on the tractor front, now on the coal front, now on the transport front. But the present period up to the next January 1 is witnessing shock operations on the whole front. When serious deficits were revealed at the end of the second year of the five-year plan, the Communist authorities cut the Gordian knot by changing the calendar to fit the facts. The official Soviet fiscal year has hitherto run from October 1 to October 1. It is henceforth to be the same as the calendar year. The three months thus left up in the air are to be employed in shock operations of an exceptionally strenuous kind. One month of the three has now elapsed and, according to our Moscow correspondent, the effort to catch up with arrears in coal, steel, timber is hampered by the failure in the key-industry, transport.

In a little more than a week the anniversary of the bolshevist revolution will be celebrated, and it is in preparation for it that the rifle squads of the secret police have probably been mobilized against unreconciled bourgeois in the service of the Soviets guilty of counter-revolution, sabotage, defeatism. The latest group of arrested officials are charged with misdirecting construction work so as to build the wrong factories or in the wrong places, creating transport difficulties, plotting to ruin the country's chemical industries, and in general to bring about the failure of the five-year plan in collaboration with Russian emigres in Paris. The public trial of the accused engineers may enable the outside world to judge more clearly whether this is an actual case of conspiracy and treason, or whether the revelation of serious shortcomings in the five-year plan demands an excuse, and possibly a scapegoat.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

NEW NEIGHBORS.

The folks next door have moved away
And other folks came in today.
There stands a lady at the door
Whom I have never seen before,
And, oh, it seems so strange to see
A man who doesn't speak to me.

My mother tells me not to go
And bother folks whom I don't know,
But ever since I've lived here, I
Have gone in there for cake and pie
And never had to ring the bell,
Because I knew them very well.

It seems so queer to stand about
And watch a strange hired girl come out
And wonder what her name can be,
Or is she baking cake for tea.
I hope before another week
Things will be fixed so we can speak.

I saw the man come home, but he Went in without a word to me,
And gave the great front door a slam
He hasn't learned just who I am.
I hope it won't be long before
I get to know the folks next door.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY dear Louise: Since your grandfather's death last week I have been wondering whether you noticed and tried to analyze the evidence of his remarkable popularity.

He had no wealth to attract fair-weather friends; he had no great reputation to give reflected glory to his intimates; he had no influence to share. His sole attraction was himself—his character and his personality.

And yet though he lived obscurely and went his quiet way without an effort to win favor the men of two counties respected him and valued him as a friend.

No man, woman or child in all the world disliked him or spoke a word concerning him except in kindness.

That can be said of few men. I wonder if you understand why it was true of him.

He was a friend to man.

He wasn't a hand-shaker or a back-slapper. He didn't say flattering things to people or make a display of his liking for them.

He simply liked people and was courteous to them in a matter-of-fact way, and he never spoke an unpleasant word about anybody.

In a community where gossip is the orthodox form of entertainment he was reluctant to believe evil and never repeated the evil that he heard.

And he went out of his way and neglected his own affairs to render, without thought of reward, the little services that friends need and can not pay for.

There was no selfishness in him.

That tells the story, and that is all the guidance you need to win the friends on whom your happiness must depend. That is all the guidance you need to make your life a joy to yourself and a blessing to your community.

Everything in this world is bought with a price and usually you get just what you pay for.

You get friendship by paying for it, and the coin used in payment is friendliness—not a gushing, hand-patting display of affection accompanied by a mechanical smile, but a genuine friendly feeling for people.

It takes character to be a friend to man. Snobs can't do it. Hypocrites cacn't do it. The selfish can't do it. The intolerant, the self-righteous and the cynical can't do it.

You must have the bed-rock humility and the decent pride to recognize low and high as comrades on a journey, differing from you only by chance, and, despite those differences, worthy of your compassion and good will.

Those who sow must harvest much, and to sow generously now is to escape the empty old age that is the lot of the selfish and the unfriendly. Love, DAD.

PRO AND CON

Various Aspects of Political Issues Discussed by the Press.

Secretary Mellon's Speech.
New York Times.

Mr. Mellon's radio address was as far as possible from being a whole-hog Republican appeal. He is too poised and intelligent a man for that. What he gave to his listeners-in was a sober financial discussion of the causes and nature of business depression. When it is as world-wide as it is today, there must be universal forces operating to bring it about and to continue it. No political party in any country can be charged with responsibility for it, or can be looked to for immediate and effective remedies. Time and the recuperative power of the people, aided by wise and cautious measures, must be our main dependence. Secretary Mellon dealt with all these matters in a philosophical spirit, but added that political stability, by which he meant the election of a Republican House of Representatives, would also be a great factor in the restoration of prosperity.

No, But It's a Habit.
New Orleans Times-Picayune.

"The other day in England an elephant, quite by accident, fell on a boy and crushed him." Maybe that was how it happened with Al Smith during the late presidential campaign. Subsequent events do not indicate that the mishap was really intentional.

Do You Mean Votes?
Indianapolis News.

The buy-it-now movement is highly commendable, especially if it is accompanied by a pay-for-it-now action.

Pinchot's Dry Plan.
Baltimore Sun.

Mr. Pinchot, in his present gubernatorial campaign, has not had much to say about prohibition, but the Democrat candidate, Mr. Hemphill, is not missing any chance to inform the electorate of Pennsylvania how dry his opponent is. It is a document containing Mr. Pinchot's plans for making the eighteenth amendment effective, as set forth in his try for the $100,000 prize offered several years ago by a millionaire New Yorker for the best suggestion along this line.

Mr. Pinchot starts by loading the job on the President, who would be called upon to fire public determination sufficiently to compel respect for prohibition. He would require pledges from Cabinet officers and other officials to obey the law and would dismiss all, including Army and Navy officers, who winked at violation. Prohibition, customs, internal revenue, Coast Guard and intelligence agents would be forced to mount the water-wagon. A conference of governors would be held at the White House and the attention of the mayors of a hundred cities would be directed to their oath of office.

In addition, Mr. Pinchot would impose upon him the duty of stirring up business and professional leaders to busy themselves with enforcement. Lastly, he would get at home brewers by cutting the "red tape" which now protects the home, making issuance of warrants for search and seizure easier and eliminating necessity for warrants where there was suspicion of law breaking.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Subordinate Political Organizations Have No Right to Violate National Platform Pledges.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under the American plan of party government the national convention is supposed to set forth in its platform the guiding principles and policies for the ensuing four years. In the meantime, the national committee represents the attitude of the party, while the President or the defeated candidate for the Presidency is its normal and titular head. Neither the President, the national committee, nor any loyal State organization has the right to assume any position on a national issue contrary to the lines laid down by the national committee. When clamorous suffragettes importuned President Wilson to espouse the cause of woman's suffrage he stoutly refused to do so on the grounds that his party had not authorized him to speak on that great issue.

If this political procedure be sound, it seems strange that sundry Republican State organizations have adopted policies, not only unauthorized by the national Republican convention, but positively contrary to its Kansas City declaration. The party pledged its good faith to the eighteenth amendment, and promised the American people, that if entrusted with the conduct of the Government, it would vigorously enforce the prohibition provision. This declaration has nowhere been modified by any competent authority, and still stands as political creed of all good and loyal Republicans. If a State convention should go on record as being opposed to the nineteenth amendment or the principle of protection, it would at once forfeit its claim to party orthodoxy. How, then, except as apostates, can defiant wet Republicans be looked upon by the loyal adherents who have kept the faith committed to them at Kansas City?

KELLY MILLER.

Wayne Wheeler Memorial Church in Ohio Will Be Dedicated on Sunday, Writes Miss Drake.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The many friends of the late Dr. Wayne B. Wheeler and of Mrs. Wheeler, who were disturbed by the recent publication of a campaign story concerning the alleged condition of the grave of Dr. Wheeler, will be interested in an announcement which I have just received from Ohio, as follows:

"Wayne Wheeler Memorial Church, at Brookfield, where the founder of the Antisaloon League was born, will be ready for dedication on Sunday, November 2. The program of the day, as announced, will consist of three public services, at 10, 2 and 7:30, respectively. Dr. Albert E. Smith, former president of Ohio Northern University, will preach in the morning and evening; the Rev. W. E. Hammaker, of Youngstown, in the afternoon."

May I take this opportunity to add (apropos of the seeming neglect of the memory of Dr. and Mrs. Wheeler) that there remain three sons—one a successful lawyer of Cleveland, one a well-known chemist of Baltimore, the third a young student in Ohio—as well as the mother of Mrs. Wheeler, and an aunt, Mrs. Lilian Cole Bethel, of Columbus. In view of their love for Dr. and Mrs. Wheeler, it seems improbable that the story referred to above has any basis in fact.

ALICE HUTCHINS DRAKE.

How to Cut Down High Cost of Shoe Shine—Do It Yourself.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note with interest a letter from C. C. Happ in The Post protesting vigorously against the cost of getting a shoe shine, priced at 10 cents, plus a nickel tip to the shiner.

Ten years ago I got tired of giving the shoe shine barons 15 cents for a shoe shine; went to the drug store, bought a shoe-shining outfit for approximately 50 cents, and since that time have shined my own shoes. The exercise is good for one; the money saved is considerable; and I find that my shine is as good as if not better than I would get in a shoe-shining parlor. I make it a point to shine my shoes at night before retiring, and I have a neat-looking pair of shoes when I leave the house in the morning.

I would suggest to Mr. Happ and to others who think as he does, to do the same, and I will wager that before long the price of shoe shines will come down. Mr. Happ may not like the job at first, but I think if he gives it a fair trial he will take it as a duty and will like it. T. P.

Small Gas Consumer Kicks at New Rate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Users of gas—the kind furnished by the Washington Gas Light Co., not the congressional brand—have just received their bills for the gas which they did not use during the month of October.

The "little fellow," as usual, gets it in the neck. I am an insignificant resident of the District whose gas bill during the summer has averaged less than 20 cents a month, and this means not for this summer alone but during many summers. Because of the smallness of the bills I have usually allowed them to go unpaid until the aggregate—including the "penalty at 10 per cent"—reached a dollar or more. The bill paid in September was 86 cents, and that was for three months supply and two penalties.

My bill, received this morning, was for the "minimum" charge of 75 cents—gas consumed 300 feet—and I am advised that if not paid within the period of grace I shall be soaked, not 10 per cent, but 10 cents additional. You can bet your last month's gas bill that Congress will have a chance to look into this.

CHEERS OF CROWDS GREET VARGAS IN RIO

Carnival Spirit Prevails as Rebel Chief Arrives to Become President.

LUIS REMAINS PRISONER

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—The generalissimo of the short-lived Brazilian revolution, Dr. Getulio Vargas, arrived here at 6:50 o'clock tonight to become provisional president of Brazil and was hailed as a conqueror.

Despite an intermittent drizzle during the day great crowds were on hand to welcome Dr. Vargas, who was defeated for Federal President in the election last spring and conducted the revolt beginning October 3.

For hours before his scheduled arrival thousands upon thousands of spectators surrounded the railway station and stood in masses along the avenue, watching the victorious southern troops marching through the streets. The soldiers, most of them gauchos from the pampas of Rio Grande do Sul and other southern States of the Brazilian Union, arrived yesterday in advance of their chieftain.

Even early today there was a festive air in this beautiful capital. The Brazilian colors and the State flag of Rio Grande do Sul were draped on all buildings in the downtown section, while itinerant hawkers were busy selling miniature flags and buttons bearing the likeness of Dr. Vargas.

Meanwhile Washington Luis, ousted as president a week ago today, was still a prisoner in Fortress Copacabana, forbidden to read the newspapers but able to browse through the garrison library and have his meals brought in from a restaurant outside. The deposed president still refused to resign, however, and he was held incommunicado even on his birthday, last Sunday.

Scuttling Plot Is Laid To Rich Steamship Man

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Capt. J. G. Murphy, wealthy steamship owner of this city, indicted by the Federal grand jury on a charge of conspiracy to scuttle an American steamship, surrendered here late today to United States Marshal J. A. Stafford. Murphy was released on $15,000 bond.

He is alleged to have conspired to scuttle the S. S. Rosa Murphy, sunk off the Florida coast in 1927. Orice C. Roddy, whose body was taken off the steamer West Cobalt off Norfolk yesterday, was among those indicted with Capt. Murphy, according to Federal officers. Roddy was engineer of the alleged scuttled vessel, according to officials.

Speedboat Captured Again.

New London, Conn., Oct. 31 (A.P.) The speedboat Pueblo, which was captured last week at the same time as the speedboat Helen was fired on and beached by Coast Guardsmen, was again seized today by a Coast Guard patrol boat. She was laden with an estimated liquor cargo of 800 sacks.

Gulf Ports' Longshoreman Strike.

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Eight vessels were tied up and 2,000 longshoremen were idle here today as the result of a strike called by the Longshoremen's Union, involving the ports of Galveston, Houston, Corpus Christi and Texas City.

Hoover Espouses Drive for Charity

Hails Spirit of Community Chest on Eve of Annual Campaigns in Nation.

New York, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—On the eve of the annual campaigns for funds by community chests throughout the Nation, President Hoover today lauded the movement as "wisely conceived" and said "it deserves the support of all our people," in a message to J. H. Case, chairman of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, as president of the Association of Community Chests and Councils.

Mr. Case made public the President's message, which read:

"The magnificent response of the American people to the present community chests campaign is characteristic of the generous impulse and friendly spirit of cooperation and good will which is one of the most powerful constructive forces in our democracy. This movement is wisely conceived and administered and deserves the support of all our people."

Fugitive Convict Burns House of Father-in-Law

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Search for Fred Stokes, described by police as the "phantom killer," who escaped from the State penitentiary and slew his wife and Edward Barnett, was renewed today with reports to authorities that he had threatened to kill his children and had burned the home of his father-in-law.

John Lloyd, a brother-in-law of Stokes, told police that Stokes encountered him here last night and admitted he had burned the home of his father-in-law, C. C. Lloyd, in hopes of shooting him as he ran from the flames. He said the escaped convict also told him he intended to kill his two children.

OIL PRODUCERS ASK SPEEDY TARIFF QUIZ

Clamor to Have Commission Lay Results at Once Before Congress.

COSTS BEING COMPARED

(Associated Press.)

Independent crude-oil producers yesterday urged speed by the Tariff Commission in laying before Congress the results of its inquiry into the production costs of American and Venezuelan petroleum.

The hearing was authorized by a Senate resolution, after six attempts during last winter's tariff battle, to remove petroleum from the free list had failed in the Senate. It was the third hearing before the commission in four days arising from objections to the Smoot-Hawley act.

After the brief formal meeting, representatives of the oil producers gave notice another campaign to make oil dutiable would be initiated in Congress immediately upon receipt of the commission's report. Commission members indicated later that their investigation, already several weeks old, would be completed before the end of December.

Russell Brown, of Ardmore, Okla., representing the Independent Petroleum Association, under questioning by the commission, suggested that for the sake of speed two reports be made, the first covering the costs of oil produced by the larger companies, with a supplementary report regarding the smaller producers.

The commission adjourned its public hearings yesterday until November 5, the day after the elections.

Theft of Two Mail Sacks Is Disclosed

$100 in Pouch Taken From Truck; $300 Lost in Later Robbery.

Two mail sacks containing registered mail have mysteriously vanished from Postoffice trucks within the last two weeks, it was revealed by postal inspectors yesterday. News of the robberies had been suppressed while a quiet search was being made for the thieves.

From the Connecticut avenue substation a pouch en route to the main office disappeared Thursday evening. Under equally mysterious circumstances another pouch was taken last week from a truck in which it was being taken from the Columbia road station.

Postal Inspector W. J. Satterfield, in charge of the investigation of both thefts, yesterday estimated that the most recent theft netted the robbers less than $300 in cash. The robbery last week yielded its perpetrators about $100, he said, adding that a complete check-up of valuables contained in the shipments had not yet been made.

R-101 Survivors Describe Death Plunge of Dirigible

Two Witnesses at Court of Inquiry Beg Not to Be Compelled to Recount Harrowing Experiences. Engineer's Story Vivid.

London, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Four men who escaped with their lives from the inferno of the dirigible R-101 when she crashed and burned on a hillside near Beauvais, France, today recounted those terrifying moments just before the wreck at the court of inquiry investigating the disaster.

So harrowing was the experience that two of them asked the court not to compel them to describe the agonized screams of their comrades, perishing in the flames, and the commission was as gentle as circumstances permitted in questioning A. J. Cook, H. J. Leech and V. Savory, engineers, and Arthur Disley, the radio operator.

It was a vivid story Cook told, and the others supported it with detail.

About 2 o'clock in the morning, a few minutes before the crash, Cook had gone on duty as engineer in charge of the fourth unit engine. The commander rang for reduced speed shortly after he reached his post. The ship dived sharply, then seemed to lunge toward the earth. In a moment she had struck with a terrific jar and seemed to bounce before striking again. Then there was a rending explosion which split the ship from bow to stern.

When he got the order for reduced speed, Cook said, he felt that something must be wrong, for the craft had been going smoothly at normal cruising speed for some hours.

It confirmed a suspicion he had had earlier when from his bunk near the gas bags he observed the containers surging about heavily.

He had barely time to look over his shoulder through the engine room window when the ship went into a deep dive. She seemed to recover for a moment, then headed downward in the sharpest dive he had ever experienced.

Then she struck. It was a matter of seconds between the first and the second times the craft hit the earth, he said.

Cook tried to scramble out of the engine gondola toward the ship when he realized what had happened, but found the main body of the dirigible a wall of flame.

"The heat was terrific," he said. "I turned back and tried to get out from the other side, but I was trapped. A longitudinal beam had blocked the opening. I lay down on an oil tank and gave up hope."

But he didn't stay there long.

"I must have been desperate," he said, "because I remember pushing the girder to one side and jumped over the side of the gondola. I landed in a tree."

It was pitch dark but for the flames from the blazing dirigible and Cook's overalls. He beat out the flames in his clothing and wandered for a time in a daze. As he passed the burning ship he heard one or two minor explosions.

Leech was alone in the smoking room when that first dive began. It was a 30-degree pitch, he said, and the glasses slid from his table into his lap. He was thrown against a bulkhead, but the ship came back to an even keel after about 45 seconds.

"I had time to pick up the glasses," he said, "and I remember one of them was broken. Then she dived again much more steeply than before. She fell for about two seconds, then crashed."

There was a blast of flame.

"I wouldn't call it a violent explosion," Leech said. "It was more like a 'woof' as when you light some gasoline poured on the floor. There was no concussion to it."

Squadron Leader Booth, commander of the R-100, also testified today. His evidence was of a technical nature.

The inquiry adjourned during his testimony until November 3.

Young Hoover Goes To Asheville Home

Elder Son of President and Capt. Boone Make Trip to Southland.

(Associated Press.)

Herbert Hoover, jr., left Washington last night, accompanied only by Capt. Joel T. Boone, the White House physician, for Asheville, N. C., where he will spend the winter seeking recovery from his tubercular ailment.

It had been announced earlier in the day at the White House that his mother would make the trip, but she remained in Washington. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hoover accompanied their son to Union Station to see him comfortably aboard his train.

The elder son of the President will rejoin his wife at Asheville, where she preceded him to prepare the place they have leased on Sunset Mountain for the reception of the invalid.

Pola Negri Opens Suit for Divorce

Gesture by French Court Toward Reconciliation With Prince Fails.

Paris, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Pola Negri, film star, appeared in divorce court here today, somewhat belated by an automobile accident, in response to a summons for conciliation with her husband.

Prince Serge Mdivani, whom the actress sued October 10, was not in court, so the case will follow the usual course of such actions.

Her appearance was in compliance with French law, and is the first step in such a suit. The judge always attempts to reunite the estranged couple before proceeding with a case.

The temperamental actress left the court room smiling broadly.

"I am glad at the prospect of being free again and able to resume my former life," she said, "devoting myself to my art."

M'DONALD'S REGIME WINS FIRST VICTORY

Labor Government Upheld, at Listless Session, on Minor Point.

PROHIBITION BILL ENTERS

London, Oct. 31 A.P.).—The McDonald government won its first victory at this session of Parliament today with the defeat of an extreme Laborite amendment to the address replying to the king's speech expressing regret that the address from the throne had contained no "proposal for Socialist reorganization of industry."

It was a listless session, for the British week-end always throws a shadow across Friday sittings.

A diversion was created, however, by the introduction of a prohibition bill by Edwin Scrymgeour, who calls himself the only prohibitionist sitting in the House. His measure, which had the first reading accorded all bills regardless of their nature, would prohibit the manufacturer and sale of intoxicating liquors. There is not the slightest chance of its getting any farther than a similar bill he introduced last year, which was killed at the second reading.

The Laborite motion, introduced by Jowett, of Bedford East, was supported by Penner-Brockway, of Leyton East, who warned the government that failure to pursue a more vigorous policy of unemployment relief might result in Fascism or even Communism.

After a brief debate, the amendment was defeated, 156 to 11.

Alleged Alcohol Agent Shot Dead in New York

New York, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Nicholas Candido, 35, said by police to have been engaged in the alcohol trade in the Bronx, was shot to death early today in 191st street. The body, with six bullet wounds in the head, was found near Candido's car which was stalled in the middle of the street.

Police said they believed he had been slain by rival alcohol dealers.

IT WAS LOCKED -- By JOHN HAWKS

CHAPTER XXVII.

When he came downstairs the next morning he found the explorer up before him, and pacing restlessly up and down the dew-laden garden.

"What do you mean to do about Prince Pozolevsky?" Armstrong asked abruptly as soon as the inspector was within earshot.

"Nothing for the moment, except have inquiries made into his past life. * * *"

"You intend to let him get away then?"

"Certainly not! But I can't arrest a man simply because his initials happen to correspond with those on the knife."

"I should think that, added to what came out at the inquest, would be quite enough to go on. * * *" Armstrong focused his piercing eyes on the inspector.

"I shall have to attend to my job as I see fit," replied the inspector a bit haughtily.

"Oh, it isn't that. Don't be offended! But if you aren't going to do anything, I am! You can't object to that?"

"Certainly not, Mr. Armstrong. If you can bring any light to bear on the case I shall be pleased."

"You're sceptical, I see! Well, by night I shall hope to have something definite which will change your view."

"I wish you luck!"

Bruce Armstrong looked calculatingly at the detective. He wasn't a bad fellow at all, he decided; only rather pig-headed. It was a case of the short-sighted vision of the civilized man against the far-seeingness of a savage, for the explorer, because of his years in the African jungles and his friendly associations with the natives, considered himself something of a savage.

"Well, let's have a friendly breakfast," he said good-humoredly. "Then I must hie me off to London."

"To call on his royal highness?" the inspector inquired with a hint of amusement.

"To find out about him."

"And you expect to have your incriminating information by night?"

"You think I'm crazy, don't you?" was the laughing rejoinder, as the men went into the breakfast-room. "Well, only remember, inspector, he laughs best who laughs last."

"I will remember," said the Inspector quietly.

Breakfast was a silent, hurried affair, for the explorer had only ten minutes before he must leave for the station. He waved a jovial farewell to the detective, and settled himself back in the motor for the 3 miles to the station. He hadn't formed any very definite idea as to how to proceed to make good his boast, but he intended to trust to his instinct, which in the past had got him out of many a tight fix. It would no doubt help him in his present quest. He had the incentive of being morally certain that Prince Pozolevsky was the guilty man; he had felt it from the first moment, and his certainty had never been shaken. From the instant that he had heard of the refusal of the Russian to shake hands with the Englishman he had been suspicious. And the conclusion had been only logical. Lord Winston must have been a mortal enemy, for him so to slight him in public. Murder was but the next step.

And now it was up to Bruce Armstrong to find what had occurred in the past which had brought about so tragic a denouement to Lady Dorothy's house party.

He chose a seat in the corner of a nearly empty compartment and continued to reflect on the matter and plan his course of action. When the train drew in at London Bridge he had decided that the first step was to go to the home office, where he had an intimate friend. He would take the man into his confidence and see what he knew about the Russian prince. This visit, consuming two hours, yielded little more than a few scant facts. But even these seemed startlingly significant to the explorer.

It appeared that, like so many Russian emigres, Prince Pozolevsky had been a man of power and wealth before the revolution. He had suffered under the Bolsheviks, and only after many hair-raising escapes had he been able to make his way to a refuge in England. His character, as far as was known, was above reproach. Armstrong gleaned further that since the prince's arrival in London he had made friends with many people of power and note in England. Above all, what interested Bruce Armstrong, and set him thinking hard, was when his friend at the home office had divulged the unexpected bit of information: "I believe, now you speak of it, that Lord Winston was in Russia, too, at the time of the revolution, a member of some commission sent out by the foreign office. I've heard—gossip only—that Prince Pozolevsky's wife ran off with Maj. Dudley, a great friend of Lord Winston's, you know, and I seem to have some vague recollection that Winston's name was mixed up with that affair in some way. * * * I can give you a note to McSteirets at the foreign office, if you like, and you may be able to learn something from him."

The explorer's heart gave a leap. This was something like. He felt that at last he was on the right trail.

The outcome of this was that an arrangement was made for the explorer and the foreign office man to meet for lunch. So it was but natural that Armstrong's heart beat high with hope as he made his way up Whitehall toward his club, where they were to have luncheon.

While nothing definite, it was so much more than he had dared anticipate that he already imagined the look on Inspector Linscott's face when he should see him that night. He'd always said detective business was nothing but common sense plus nerve and persistence, and now he felt he was on the verge of proving this.

Prince Pozolevsky had made his grave mistake when he said: "Tchort poberi evo!"—not suspecting that he would be overheard or understood. The greatest criminals made inevitable slips, and that was where the Russian made his, Armstrong ruminated as he walked through busy Pall Mall on that fine June morning.

McSteirets was waiting for him when he arrived, and they at once adjourned to a tiny room where Armstrong had engaged a private table for two. He didn't want to run any chance of being interrupted or overheard.

"I'm afraid I'm going to be a disappointment," began McSteirets as soon as the waiter had served the hors-d'oeuvres and left them alone. "From what I gathered over the phone you wanted information to incriminate Prince Pozolovsky in this affair, and what I can tell you would seem to point quite the other way."

"I don't understand." Bruce Armstrong frowned darkly. "Didn't Princess Pozolevsky run away from her husband with Winston's friend, and didn't he aid and abet her in the elopement? That's what I gathered from my talk this morning."

"I know, but that's just what Winston didn't do! He was a stickler for conventions, honor and all that sort of thing, you know. Winston would never have let any woman, no matter how beautiful, lead him into a dishonorable act!"

"Um. Well, let me have your version, Mr. McSteirets, if I may," said the explorer, pouring out some wine for his companion. He then raised his glass. "To the finding of Lord Winston's murderer!" he toasted, and they both drank silently.

"A toast I can join you in with all my heart," said McSteirets, after a pause. "I only knew Winston slightly, but he was white clean through. Of that I'm certain!"

"Then why in the devil did Prince Pozolevsky refuse to shake his hand?"

"I think you may be making too much of that. It may not have been at all deliberate. Russians may not be in the habit of hand-shaking. At all events, you must allow for eccentricities."

"Even to calling upon the devil to take their friends, I presume," returned Armstrong sarcastically.

"Isn't it possible you misunderstood?" * * * I'm dashed sorry. * * * That's all I can say. * * *"

"It is not!" interrupted the explorer irritably. "I know Russian as well as I do English, and I distinctly heard him say 'Tchort poberi evo!' which means, 'The devil take him!'"

"Even so," was the smiling answer, "you've doubtless told many a man to go to the devil whom you wouldn't murder. It isn't enough * * *"

"Oh, I have something more! I can tell you in confidence, I think. The knife with which Lord Winston was murdered is monogrammed 'B. P.' Boris Pozolevsky fits nicely, you must admit."

McSteirets started. "I didn't know * * * I'm dashed sorry. * * * That's all I can say. * * *"

Armstrong looked narrowly at his companion, who was obviously troubled. For some minutes they ate in silence. Then the explorer leaned back in his chair and said:

"You haven't told me what you knew yet. I've done all the talking so far."

"It's very little I can tell you. It is true that Lord Winston was in Petrograd during the trouble of 1917-18, and it is also true that Princess Pozolevsky ran away with Maj. Dudley, leaving her husband in Russia, and in great danger. The princess is a conservative fellow. He's never mentioned the subject to anyone as far as I know. But as he didn't kill Maj. Dudley, against whom he certainly had the greater grievance, I don't see why you should be so sure he was mixed up in this affair."

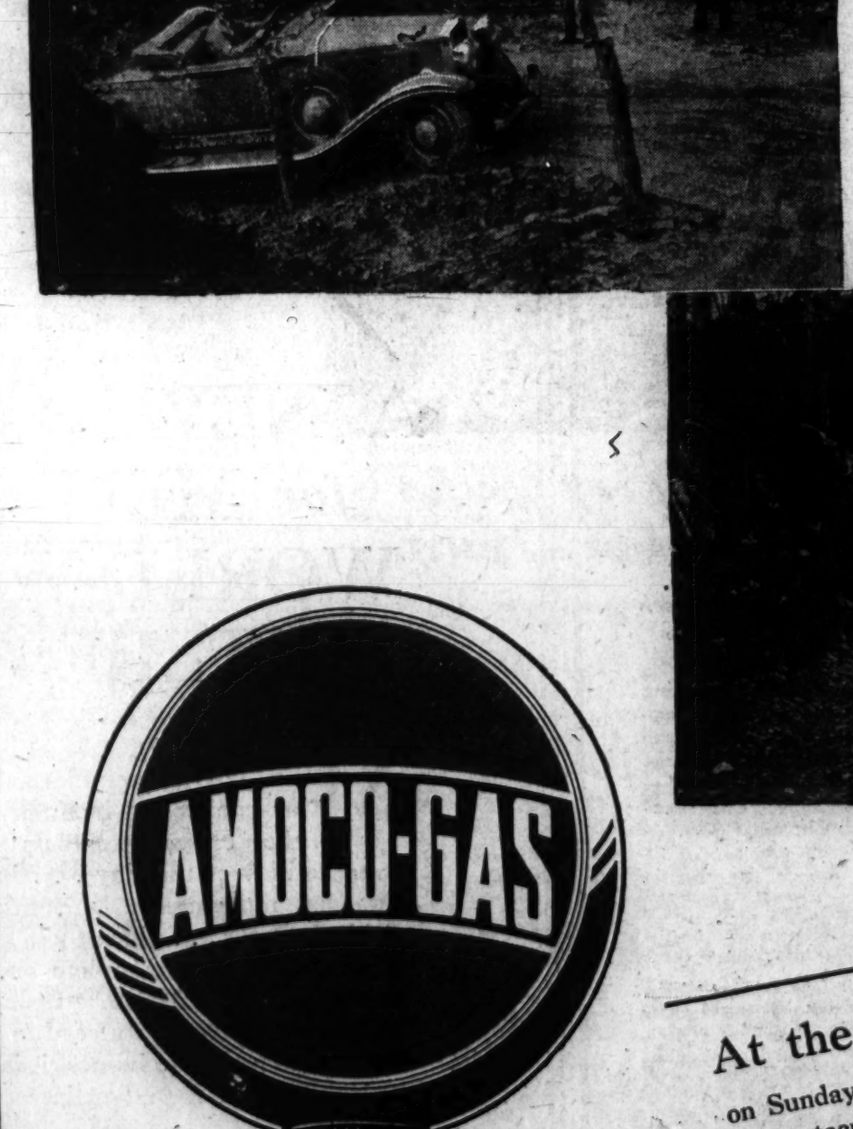
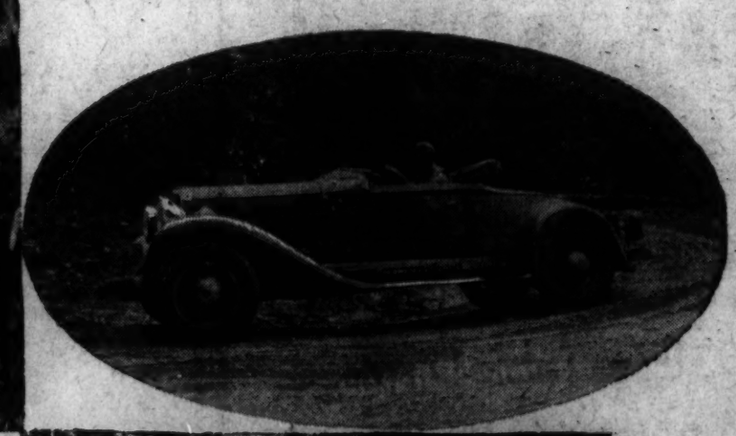
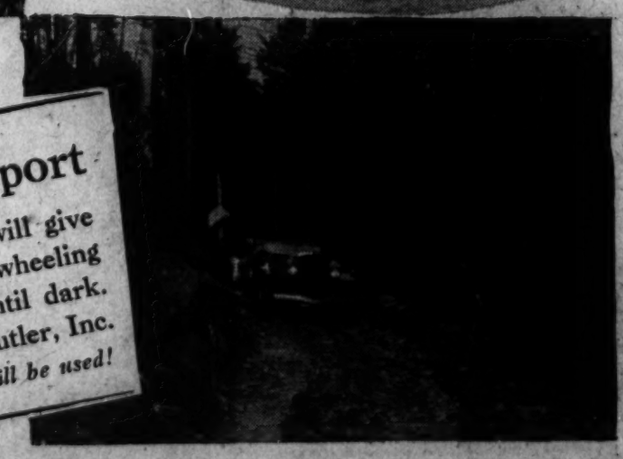
Ab Jenkins in free wheeling Studebaker using Amoco-Gas breaks all records up Mt. Mitchell

The top of Eastern America







DOWN in North Carolina stands the highest peak east of the Rockies--and up the side of Mt. Mitchell (elevation 6711 feet) winds a narrow, many-curved road--18½ miles long.

Ab Jenkins, fresh from his record-breaking climbs up Mt. Washington and Mt. Mansfield, highest of the White and Green Mountains of New England--brought his Free Wheeling Studebaker President Roadster to the foot of Mt. Mitchell a short time ago.

And then records began to fall in rapid succession. Powered by AMOCO-GAS, the Studebaker dashed up the twisting mountain road. Slamming into hairpin turns, skidding around them to make every second count, straightening out with but little loss of speed, Jenkins sped to the highest point an automobile can reach in 45 minutes flat. The old record had been a minute and fifteen seconds slower.

On the dash down, Jenkins clipped the course record for the descent by almost half a minute--so all records for Mt. Mitchell now officially belong to Studebaker and AMOCO-GAS!

For all these record-breaking climbs--Jenkins has specified AMOCO-GAS, the motor fuel he knows he can count on to make and break records.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Women Start G. O. P. Club In Maryland

Sixteen Society Members Organize in Calvert County.

CALVERT COUNTY in Maryland will have a Republican woman's Club. Sixteen women, members of Easton's smart set, met on Tuesday at the Harbor Club in Easton determined to rally to the cause of Republicanism through the medium of definite organization. Prompted primarily by the enthusiasm of Mrs. Harold Walker, of Calvert County, and Mrs. Herbert Neal, of Easton, and secondarily by the impending election the small legion of "politicians" assembled at luncheon to initiate plans looking to a permanent Republican organization. The group will meet again on November 12 when organization will be instituted and the first woman's Republican and Independent Club in Calvert County will become a reality.

Although surrounded on all sides by Democratic opinion which always has held sway in the feminine ranks of the Eastern Shore, the instigator of the club, Mrs. Walker, expresses keen enthusiasm over the proposed association. As one after another of her guests assembled for the Tuesday luncheon each remarked, with surprised pleasure, "Why, I didn't know you were a Republican."

Definitely pledged to Republican policy, the new club will launch its ship of politics under the banner of independence so far as local politics is concerned, according to an announcement by Mrs. Walker. The club, she declares, will pursue the tenor of its way encouraged by victories of the Republican party in Maryland which carried the State for Harding, Coolidge and Hoover.

In Mrs. Walker the new club will boast a leader of acknowledged power. Only last spring an amusing incident thrust her into the world of journalism and placed her on the board of directors of the Maryland Independent, the first Republican newspaper ever published on the eastern shore. For Mrs. Walker was inducted into the publishing business because her husband, upon invitation of the editor, refused to be bothered with the berth of director of the paper so she assumed it herself.

Senator and Mrs. George Return to Capital.

Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, is now in Washington at the Mayflower, where he and Mrs. George will maintain an apartment during the congressional season.

The Second Counselor of the Italian Embassy, Signor Giuseppe Catalani, will arrive in New York today after passing some time in Europe. He will come direct to Washington. Signora Catalani will continue to visit abroad until later in the winter. Signor Catalani is secretary of the Italy-America Society of Washington.

Mr. Witold Wankowicz, Commercial Counselor of the Polish Embassy, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Carlton.

Col. Campbell Hodges, military aid to President Hoover, was best man on Thursday in New York at the wedding of Mrs. Mary Fraser Moose, widow of Maj. William Lewis Moose, jr., and Col. Stephen Wilson Winfree, Twelfth U. S. Cavalry. The ceremony took place in the afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Ferdinand Wilson on East Fifty-fourth street. Mr. Wilson gave the bride in marriage, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Walter H. Moran, of the Church of St. Vincent Ferrer.

The ceremony was followed by a buffet supper.

Among the other guests were Maj. Gen. Hanson E. Ely, former chief of staff, and Mrs. Ely, who are now stationed at Governors Island in New York.

Col. and Mrs. Winfree will be stationed at Brownsville, Tex., after November 15, where Col. Winfree will be second in command.

Maj. John T. McLane, U. S. A., and Mrs. McLane, and their two children, Jean and Jack, will leave for Fort Sam Houston, Tex., where Maj. McLane has been ordered for duty, about December 18.

Maj. McLane has been stationed at Fort Myer for two years, having previously been on duty in the offices of the chief of cavalry. He has been detailed as a member of the general staff corps in Fort Sam Houston.

Maj. and Mrs. McLane will be greatly missed by members of the Army group. They have taken an active part in the various military fetes which are held at Fort Myer during the year.

Prof. Arthur Pope, adviser on Persian art to various museums, is the guest of the former Minister to Egypt and Mrs. Franklin Mott Gunther, who make their home in Georgetown, at 2812 N street.

Mr. Gunther is president of the American Institute for Persian Art and Archeology.

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Arthur Wallace Dunn will come to Washington today from Charleston, S. C., where the former has been with his ship. They will be stationed in Washington this winter and have taken a house on Belmont road, overlooking Rock Creek Park.

Representative and Mrs. Cordell Hull are patrons for the dance to be given this evening at the Willard Hotel, by the Tennessee Society. Other patrons for the event are the Chief Engineers of the Army and Mrs. Lyttle Brown, Col. Wade H. Cooper, Dr. and Mrs. E. M. Ellison, and Col. and Mrs. Andrew Chaffee.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Norment entertained last evening at the Hallowe'en dance at the Shoreham Hotel. Their guests included Miss Alice Worthington and her fiance, Mr. Bishop Hill, and Mr. and Mrs. William Sturtevant.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Herbert C. Crosby will release the hounds this afternoon at the official hunt which will open at the Woman's National Country Club at 2:30 o'clock. A tea and dance will be held for the sportsmen after the chase.

Wade Ellises Return From London Visit

Chief Justice Presents Bouquet to Capital Matron.

"Once upon a time"—is the only proper way to begin the recent adventures of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Hampton Ellis.

While in London, where they spent the entire summer with the exception of a week's motor trip in Ireland, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis attended the election of the new Lord Mayor of London. They were among the 40 guests who viewed the picturesque proceedings from a balcony in the Guild Hall and seemed to be transported to medieval days when they looked down on the procession of justices in long red robes with brown fur around their necks and each carrying a large bouquet of flowers held in lace paper holders.

After the ceremony the illusion was enhanced when the judges left the Guild Hall to ride through the streets of London in coaches, the leading one being a real counterpart of those in the fairy tales with steps that were let down, men on the box in the livery which might have been created by Cinderella's godmother, and the traditional four horses.

Sir Ernest Wild, chief justice of the London courts, presented his bouquet to Mrs. Ellis, who treasures all that remains of it as a souvenir of a memorable occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, who returned on the Majestic recently, have opened their home for the winter.

Mme. Hugo de Pena, wife of the Minister from Uruguay to Mexico, will visit her mother, Mrs. John Mason Hundley, at her home in Baltimore, arriving the middle of next month. She will bring her young son, Hugo de Pena, jr., with her and will be joined at Christmas by the minister. They probably will come to Washington during their visit in this country as they are widely known in the Capital where Dr. de Pena formerly served as secretary of the Legation of Uruguay. His father was the former minister from that country. Dr. de Pena left Washington for Mexico City to which post he was named minister for his country.

Mrs. Albert Relyea announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Eleanor Relyea, to Mr. James Marion Johnston, jr., son of Mrs. Johnston and the late Mr. James Marion Johnston. The wedding will take place in November.

Mr. Johnston and his mother make their home at the Hay-Adams House, having sold their home on Twenty-first street, where they lived for many years and entertained charmingly. It was in their home that Mr. Johnston's sister, the former Miss Sophy Johnston, now Mrs. Randolph Mason, of New York, made her debut and was assisted by her friend, Miss Helen Taft, who is now Mrs. Frederick J. Manning. He has another sister, Mrs. Lacey Hall, wife of Maj. Hall, U. S. A.

Miss Relyea, a graduate of Smith College and a member of the Junior League, lives with her mother at 1717 K street.

Mrs. Allan Ryan, jr., of New York, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Newbold, in their apartment at the Mayflower.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rickey have as their guests their daughter, Mrs. Samuel Eells, of Cleveland, and their son, Mr. Norris Rickey.

The fourth annual debutante dinner dance will be given at the Willard Hotel December 10. The dinner dance was established by a committee of nine, composed of mothers of the season's debutantes and each year following nine mothers of debutantes of the current season, with three mothers of buds of the preceding year, form the committee for the exclusive party.

Miss Frances Morse, daughter of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. John Morse, entertained at dinner last night in honor of Miss Mary Stuart Birdsall, before the Halloween dance at the Mayflower.

Capt. E. J. Dorn, U. S. N., and Mrs. Dorn will return to Washington November 6, after spending the summer in Los Angeles. They will make the journey by water, having sailed from San Diego by transport on October 18.

Mrs. Theiss, widow of Capt. T. Theiss, U. S. N., is a passenger on the same vessel.

Miss Suzanne Pollard, daughter of the Governor of Virginia, has arrived in town for a short visit with Miss Katherine Huston and Miss Mildred Huston.

Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose has issued invitations for a dinner on December 10, preceding the first meeting of the Friday evening dancing class.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Southgate have returned from their summer home at Osterville, Mass., and taken an apartment at the New Shoreham Hotel, where they will make their home this winter.

Mrs. Hagner Hostess at Bal Masque

Debutantes of Current Season and Last Are Honor Guests.

Youth reigned at the Mayflower last night, where debutantes of this season and last were whirled into one of the first parties of the winter, the Halloween bal masque given under direction of Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner. As though the witches of Scotland or trolls of Norse mountains had shared in preparations for the party the ball room presented a scene for merry-making in spirit with the holiday night. Yellow and black gave out a colorful note in the ball room as dancers in costumes of fanciful charm threaded their way against a background with its lighted pumpkins, black cats, silhouettes and weird cut-outs for decorations. The surroundings prompted gayety and gayety ruled supreme.

Maids and youths of fashionable society danced gayly through the night. Like little girls from the old red schoolhouse, the committee of debutantes of last season, dressed as small maids, tripped about among the debutantes of this season, who were "turned out" in cunning baby frocks.

At midnight, when witches roam, the lights were turned out and the dancers moved through a waltz while showers of confetti whitened the floor and colored lights added a varied note. Many of the guests who came to "look on" and mingle a little in the gayety of the younger set were also in costume. Supper was served after midnight in the Chinese room.

The mothers of debutantes of this season and last received. Included in the former group were Mrs. George B. Pillsbury, Mrs. Gregg C. Birdsall, Mrs. Martha G. Hall, Mrs. C. Willard Hayes, Mrs. William Payne Meredith, Mrs. W. Wayne Wirgman and Mrs. Millard West. Among the latter were Mrs. Guy V. Henry, Mrs. Frank W. Freyer, Mrs. John Wise Morse, Mrs. Clarke C. Wren, Mrs. Eric Swenson and Mrs. Wilmer Bolling.

As a Change from Potatoes

ISN'T there sometimes too much sameness in the luncheons and dinners you prepare? It's so in every family—but it's so hard to think of something different!

A Simple, Inexpensive Idea

Here's a happy thought! Have MUELLER'S MACARONI, prepared according to one of the recipes specially planned for this better macaroni. If there are small children in your family, the "elbow" macaroni recipe shown below will make a real "hit," as the shape makes it very easy for them to eat.

BAKED ELBOW MACARONI
with Pimento Cheese

1 pkg. MUELLER'S ELBOW MACARONI; 2 packages pimento cheese; 2 cups top milk or thin cream; ½ tsp. salt; ½ tsp. paprika. Parboil the elbow macaroni 7 min. in 4 qts. boiling water with 1 tbsp. salt. Drain. Beat cheese into milk until thoroughly blended. Add salt and paprika. Put layer of elbow macaroni in buttered baking dish, then layer of cream mixture, alternating with elbow macaroni on top. Bake 15 min. in moderate oven. Serve hot.

The Exclusive Mueller Processes

Made from a choice blend of farina, according to special Mueller processes, MUELLER'S MACARONI is so tasty that it makes a delicious addition to a meal, even without any flavoring but ordinary gravy. It contains the most nourishing part of the wheat, that builds new vigor and energy both into adults and into the young, growing bodies of children.

A Delightful Lightness

Nine minutes' boiling will give you the best results; two minutes more may be allowed if special tenderness is desired. No other macaroni cooks up so light and "fluffy"—so be sure to say "MUELLER'S" to your grocer. He has it, or can quickly get it for you.

THE chains are forever silencing the criticism of political discrimination against the major parties which has greeted them in almost every campaign and in Congress. Both the Republicans and Democrats in response to invitations from the canny Aylesworth, of the NBC, and the shrewd Paley, of Columbia, have been given every opportunity to place the general issues of the forthcoming campaign before the people.

This may prove a skillful move financially as well as politically, as after having given certain of their services free, the chains find themselves in a good position to line up at the pie counter when the national or State committees spend money for advertising.

A visitor to a newspaper office in New York one night last week reports seeing a makeshift radio room in which were eight or nine radios all going full blast. In front of each set was a reporter provided with the manuscript of a political speaker, listening to him and checking up on whether or not the handout given to the newspapers tallied with what he really said.

In the old days reporters had to hoof it all over creation trailing these speakers and spend hours of time waiting for them to begin. Now they accomplish the same thing in a few minutes without leaving their offices. Instead of covering only one city they can cover the country.

AN agency had been employed to get up a program for a large manufacturer. The only stipulation was that it be a high-class series—nothing cheap. The manufacturer suggested a series of nationally known concert artists and stars. So the agency built up a tentative list of talent, which included Mary Garden, Eddie Cantor, George Jessel and Mischa Elman. It was sent to the sponsor.

The sponsor prided himself on his musical background. He knew what he wanted. He wired the following answer to the agency:

"Garden, Cantor and Jessel O. K. Cross off Mischa Elman. We want nothing but nationally known talent."

Those who are fond of the A. & P. Gypsy music will get to hear it in the mornings as well as evenings with the inauguration of "Daily Food News" Monday (WRC, 9:45 a. m.).

Charles Magnate, accordionist, claims the championship of all radio workers. He is heard in 31 broadcasts each week.

TONIGHT's the night, from 11 o'clock to 1 a. m., of WBAL's buster fifth birthday celebration in Baltimore. It was the intention to give the program in full, but Maestro Huber has provided a list of entertainment so long that it would take up this entire column.

Suffice it to say those tuning in will hear the very cream of WBAL's talent.

The second act of the opera "Tannhauser" will be sung tonight by the Chicago Civic Opera Company, the first of this season's performances heard from there (WJZ network, 10 o'clock).

Josef Lhevinne, Russian pianist, will play Beethoven's Concerto No. 3 with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra tomorrow afternoon (WMAL, 3 o'clock).

If his talk is given as per schedule, H. G. Wells tomorrow will hand back what his old side partner, Bernard Shaw, handed him while introducnig Einstein (WMAL, 12:30 p. m.).

AN EMBARRASSED but determined girl, with a silently abashed young man at her side, approached Phillips H. Lord after a recent broadcast.

"Dr. Parker," she stammered, "will you marry me?"

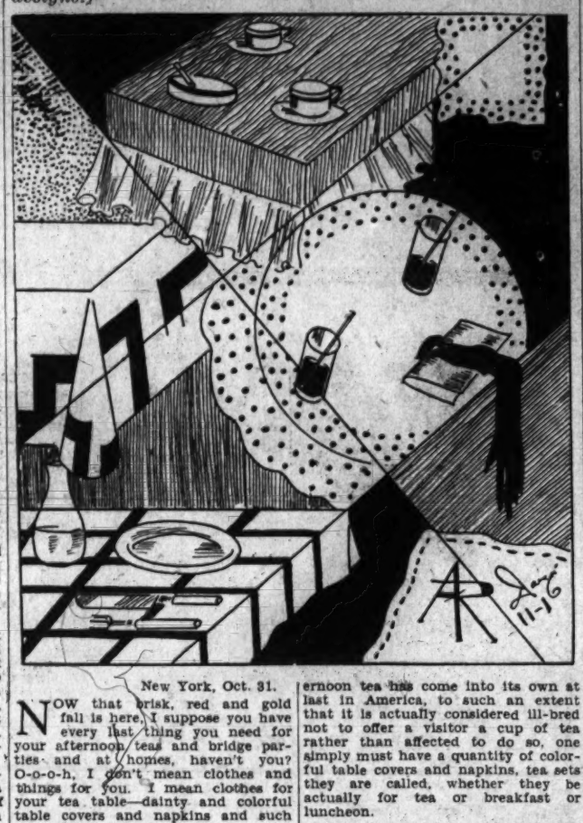
The young actor who takes the parts of Seth Parker and Uncle Abe swallowed his bewilderment, and explained that he is already married.

"Oh, I mean, will you marry Frank and me?" the girl hastily added. And she went on to explain that she and her fiance had met during a radio party, were ardent followers of Seth Parker's Sunday night hymn sings, and thought it would be a perfect culmination of their romance if "Dr. Parker could only perform the ceremony."

Lord told the young couple he regretted the fact that he is only a minister's son, and not a Doctor of Divinity in his own right. So with Seth Parker's well wishes, the intended bride and groom set out to continue their search for a minister.

Jane Interprets the MODE

Bright colors, gay peasant embroideries and unusual fabrics mark this autumn's tea and luncheon sets. (Dah-ray designs.)



New York, Oct. 31.

NOW that brisk, red and gold fall is here, I suppose you have every last thing you need for your afternoon teas and bridge parties and at homies, haven't you? O-o-o-h, I don't mean clothes and things for you. I mean clothes for your tea table—dainty and colorful table covers and napkins and such things that express the glorious fun, these days, of entertaining.

Now that the custom of having afternoon tea has come into its own at last in America, to such an extent that it is actually considered ill-bred not to offer a visitor a cup of tea rather than affected to do so, one simply must have a quantity of colorful table covers and napkins, tea sets they are called, whether they be actually for tea or breakfast or luncheon.

Have you seen those vivid, bold, peasant-embroidered luncheon and tea sets in the shop windows? That is something truly original and altogether charming in tea sets, now I tell you. Because the colors in the embroidery can be made to harmonize with your tea service, with the flowers that you have on the table, with the furnishings of the room, in the most unobtrusively artistic way.

And then there were the heavy crepe marocain and heavy crepe de chine sets that I noticed just before I left Paris, which had an elegance all their own. O-o-o-h, there is romance in luncheon and tea sets these days!

* * * *

Well, it was the greatest fun! And not a bit as hard as it looked either. We just adored it, so Mamzelle played around with some of my linen tea sets and a lot of bright-hued "boil-proof" floss until we found out just how peasant embroidery could be done other than by peasants.

Then I already had some ideas that I brought with me from Paris for unusual and lovely little tablecloth and napkin sets, so we put it all in a leaflet with careful illustrations that you can easily follow, and that's what you can send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for next week. That is, of course, you can send your letter today, and we will mail it next week, you see.

* * * *

Have you seen those very practical cardboard or lightweight wooden shoe boxes which you can buy for around a dollar in any of the large department stores? They are certainly a clever way of keeping your shoes from coming into contact with one another, and all in one place, because a set of drawers holding three or six pairs of shoes can be put on the closet shelf or on the floor. They are just like any other set of drawers, except that the "drawers" in this case are cardboard shoe boxes such as shoes come in from the shoe store when you buy them.

* * * *

It has been brought to my attention that a so-called beauty expert of Far Eastern extraction claims that I use his mysterious products which are supposed to do miraculous things with eyelashes, sagging muscles, &c., in the space of a few weeks.

There doesn't exist the beauty preparation, either medicinal or otherwise, which can have any beneficial results within a few weeks or even months. Nor am I allowed to sponsor any brand of anything, do not, and would not if I could. If the day ever comes that a woman can improve even one square inch of herself in a few weeks, it will be a scientific discovery limited to no firm or doctor, and heralded in every newspaper in the world.

* * * *

And tomorrow you should make it a point to read Dare's weekly fashion letter in the big Sunday Washington Post.

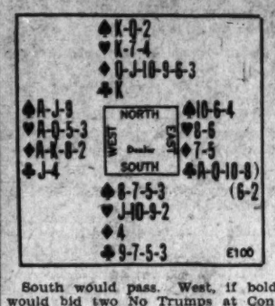
WORK ON BRIDGE

(This article is intended for the Auction and Contract Bridge beginner.)

Many cases arise in Auction and Contract in which it is advisable to sacrifice a possible, or even probable, trick in order to assume game. The following hand will illustrate.



South would pass. West, if bold, would bid two No Trumps at Contract; if timid, he would bid two Hearts or two Diamonds. North would pass in either event and East would bid three Clubs if West had bid a suit, three No Trumps if two No Trumps had been West's bid.

At Auction the chances are that West's one No Trump would be the only bid. Of course, at either Auction or Contract, if East bid three Clubs, West would bid three No Trumps; so all the bidding gets around to West playing at a No Trump declaration, and to North's leading a Diamond.

Looking at the combined hands, the declarer can count upon winning two Diamonds, one or two Hearts and one with a possible two Spades; but to make game it is essential that dummy's Clubs should be run. If that can be done, two Diamonds, one Heart and one Spade, supplemented by five Clubs, will produce game. Consequently Declarer leads the Jack of Clubs to trick 2, intending to finesse it and hoping that South will win the trick with the King. It will be very embarrassing if the King is held up and a second Club lead has to be made with the King's location uncertain.

However, the King of Clubs is played by North on the first Club lead, and Declarer's duty is clear. It is possible, although not probable, that North has another Club and that all the Clubs can be run; but it is more than likely that North's King is a singleton, and that if East plays the Ace, South's four Clubs, headed by the Nine, will stop the taking of more than three Club tricks. So game should be insured by letting East duck in spite of holding Ace-Queen-Ten, and thus assure the winning of five Club tricks, no matter what lead North makes to the next trick.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

I HAVE an empty cold frame. What can I start in this frame that can later be taken into the house to bloom in midwinter? F. E.

You might fill this frame with any perennials which you started in July or August. If you planted small plants of English daisies or pansies in the frame at this time, you would soon have a few fresh flowers for house use in midwinter. These plants bloom all winter in a frame. Violets may also be flowered in a cold frame; in fact, this is the way in which florists grow them in winter.

Kindly tell me how to take care of elephant's ears in winter. Also a poinsettia which is at present in splendid condition. When shall I start my cyclamen bulb? This is also a bulb which blossomed beautifully around Christmas. Is a Jerusalem cherry a hardy plant? MAR-KO.

The caladium esculentum, or elephant's ear, is not hardy. When the leaves have been touched by frost, the bulbs must be lifted, the old stems cut off, and when thoroughly dried placed where the temperature does not fall below 50 degrees until time for planting out another season. Keep your poinsettia in a well-ventilated place where the temperature remains near 65 degrees at night as well as during the day. Any chilling will cause the leaves to turn yellow and fall. The plant will require large quantities of water when in bloom. Give it some stimulation in the form of liquid manure when the buds show color. We have prepared a circular on the "Care of the Poinsettia," which I shall be pleased to send you if you care to write again, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Your cyclamen bulb should have been started in early September. A Jerusalem cherry is not a hardy plant.

Kindly tell me the name of the plant from which I am inclosing a leaf. MARGARET A.

It is impossible to identify a plant from one tiny leaf. Perhaps if you care to give me some description of the plant I may be able to tell you its name.

Any information you will give me concerning the care of rhododendrons will be greatly appreciated. Last spring I planted four which had been carefully dug by my florist with large balls of soil about their roots. They have done well all summer until this last week, when leaves of one of the plants began to turn brown. My friends all tell me that in this locality, due to cold winters, it is impossible to grow these shrubs, which are so hardy in my old home. Please tell me how to protect them. A. C. M. R.

The soil in which your rhododendrons are planted must be acid, free from lime. The soil that suits them best is one composed of loam, leaf-mold or peat, and sand in equal quantities. They like plenty of water and shelter from the winter sun. Their roots must be mulched throughout the entire year with decayed leaves, pine needles or peat moss. They are likely to be infested with the lace-wing fly, which secretes itself on the under surface of the leaves, causing the foliage to become yellowish or brownish in appearance and slightly curled. After the lace-wing fly has been detected, the best thing to do is to begin to spray the bush at once. A good spray is made from five pounds of fish-oil soap, one-half pint nicotine extract to ten gallons of water. September, May and June are the months to spray for this insect. Better protect your rhododendrons with a screen of burlap stretched between stakes driven into the ground above the bushes. This will keep the leaves from thawing and freezing in alternate warm and cold weather, and when the warm spring winds come will keep the plants from drying out and will prevent other injuries which may happen to an unprotected plant.

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is supplied.

What Today Means to You

"SCORPIO."

IF November 1 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 a. m. to 8:30 a. m., from 4 p. m. to 5 p. m. and from 11 p. m. to midnight. The danger periods are from 10 p. m. to 11 p. m. and from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m.

Business affairs will go well on this date, but trouble is predicted within the domestic sphere—family bickerings and disputes. Poor time for speculative investments. Health well maintained. A frivolous time in the evening.

Children born on this November 1 will have good-humored dispositions, and will have rather yielding natures and be changeable in their opinions. The emotional side of their natures, and their imaginations and intuitions will be highly developed. They will be warm-hearted.

You have a very well controlled nature, and you rarely let your emotions carry you off your feet. You are not heartless, but your heart must bow to the dictates of your head. Your mind is the ruling factor in your life. Your wells of sentiment have gone dry from misuse, as you seem afraid to let yourself revel in what you call foolishness. You will be more sympathetic and understanding in your human relationships after real sorrows have come into your own life—and you will not live without them. You will also learn tolerance through some bitter personal experiences. Life is going to be a hard teacher, but you will be a good pupil, and will seldom have to repeat your lessons.

You are fitted for some pursuit where you can direct or control others. You never show favoritism, but you always try to be square and just. You rule with an iron hand and a cool head. You are respected far more than you are loved, although you show the softer side of your nature within your home, or to your intimate friends. There is something of the dramatic in you, and you express a liking for grandeur and ceremony. If you had a more pronounced sense of humor, you would take yourself and the rest of the world less seriously. You do not take kindly to jokes on yourself. You have the ability to work hard and to accomplish much, and you never neglect your outstanding duties.

Successful people born November 1:

Morgan Dix, clergyman.
Charles F. Pidgin, author and statistician.
Stephen Crane, author.
Mme. Albani, operatic star.
Cheiro, famous astrologer.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

EXERCISE AND ACID.

A. C. H. writes that he has read that exercise causes us to manufacture acid and that the body must remain alkaline to be healthy. He says he has the habit of doing a daily dozen in order to preserve his health. He asks if the facts cited mean that he should stop his exercises, keep very still, and thus live in health a century or more.

The answer to A. C. H. is that the facts he cites are essentially correct, but the conclusion drawn is not justified. Other facts of overshadowing importance are omitted from the calculation.

When a muscle does its work it uses up stored glycogen, a form of sugar, converting it into lactic acid. It uses up some other substances, but they do not enter into this discussion. This lactic acid accumulates in the muscle and remains there for a while, thus causing soreness and stiffness. In a few days some of it has been changed back to glycogen and restored to the reservoirs. Some has been converted into carbonic acid and excreted by the lungs in the breath.

The presence of lactic acid in muscles is responsible for soreness and stiffness after exercise. This acid and also carbonic acid, uses up some of the excess alkali carried in reservoirs for just such emergencies. When a fox is run until he dies of fatigue postmortem rigidity follows close on the heels of death. The explanation, both of death and quickly following rigidity, is that so much lactic acid is produced that the alkali reserve is used up, or nearly so, and the tissues become acid or almost acid.

So much in elaboration of the foundation. Now for the superstructure. The weight of the body, after the weight of the bones has been subtracted, is not very much more than the weight of its muscles. The brain, lungs, heart and liver are very important organs, but they do not show up well in the weight column. These muscles need exercise.

Every living thing must work or suffer and die. All living things produce poisonous substances as by-products of their work. Provision is made for the removal of these by-products. It is true that a working muscles produces lactic acid and that this product uses up some of the body's alkali resources. It is true that this does harm.

But the harm done is far less in the long run than would be that of inaction. In the first place the amount of lactic acid produced is small as compared with the amount of alkali available. Because flying across the Atlantic Ocean is dangerous it does not follow that an aviator should worry about flying across a creek. Or, using another illustration, the beating heart muscles use up glycogen, make lactic acid, and draw on the alkali reserve. But we would not consider stopping the heart to avoid that.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Self-Assurance.

Mothers of today who know so much more about the physical care and character training of their children than did their grandmothers, are, paradoxically, enough handicapped.

That better knowledge, in a way, affects the fundamental basis of their relationship with their children.

Grandmother did not know much about proper feeding, nor even the names of common psychological concepts, her judgment may or may not have been sound, but—she was sure of herself.

She knew that she knew best what was good for her child, and her child knew that she knew it.

Her self-assurance, even when making mistakes must have given him a certain sense of security. He knew where he stood with her.

He was told quite definitely what was good and what was bad, and if the adjustments required of him were often difficult and sometimes crippling to his developing personality he at least possessed during his formative years the benefits of fairly consistent treatment.

Modern children can not help but suffer from the fact that in many instances their mothers have acquired more knowledge than they are able to handle without losing temporarily both self-confidence and common sense.

It should comfort the conscientious modern mother to realize that if she herself is a cheerful, well-organized personality possessed of a normal amount of maternal feeling she can with relative impunity afford to make a good many mistakes.

It will be a long while before her technique can catch up with her knowledge. Meanwhile she must try not to be overwhelmed by it.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

They Love to Save.

IN this day of waste, it is a pleasure to hear from wives who take pride in managing their households systematically and scientifically, thus relieving the strain that most men are feeling during this crisis in business. In happy contrast to the ones who are moaning over summer vacations that had to be forgotten, and promised new cars that failed to materialize, a few women are ...ing their share of the general ...h-up and meeting it like trained ...ers. One woman who has had ...ything and lost everything says ... is getting a new thrill out of running her own house and feeding five ...ple on $13 a week! And that, ...ends, is some achievement!

"Let women stop interfering in the ...en's business and run their own end of the business, which is the home, and we will all get back to normal. This is no time for nagging the men. They have all they can do to bear what they are going through. If we find it hard to do without a promised car or fur coat, it is twice as hard for them to see us having to go without. I am getting a real thrill figuring ways and means to feed five people on $13 a week, and I do it, too. Meat every day and bacon and eggs for breakfast. Life can't be always the same. And it is a weak woman who can only meet one set of circumstances. We have been used to everything, but we have met reverses like a lot of others and must simply meet the conditions and develop through them. We are not one bit less happy than we were simply because we have accepted everything instead of fighting everything. Our whole style of living is changed. But that is not going to hurt us one bit.

"If the wives will do their part and be good sports through these hard days the men will get back their nerve and confidence far sooner. A man who dreads to open his own front door at night is in no state to meet emergency. And some of the nagging that is going on right now is a shame. I do not know where women keep themselves that they can know so little of what is a world-wide condition.

"Some of my friends are treating their husbands as if they had personally brought about the conditions under which we are all suffering together. Why do they not just knuckle down and dig, instead of going into sulks? I enjoy saving now that the first shock is over. And, honestly, whole days pass now when we never even think about our loss. It is the only way."

That is one wife's view on the present upset. Another writes of having deliberately married a poor man, although accustomed to all that money could buy:

"We did not even dream of a wedding trip. Too poor. He was at the office next morning just as if nothing had happened. How I love him! How I love to cook and fuss for that man! And when his praise comes I am repaid for everything. Anybody can accumulate things, but few find love and just the right one to fuss over and spoil. I spoil him—on purpose. And he spoils me. We make a game of it. And we see who can do the most for the other. That is my idea of life—to get all that you need from within yourself, happiness and joy and pride. We need nothing beyond our means, for we find our happiness in the small joys that each day brings. We think our little home just perfect, and I can only hope when we have a bigger one that we will be as happy in it.

"I never saw a bargain basement store before my marriage, but now I know just where anything is 5 cents cheaper. And dollar days! I never knew what fun a dollar could be until I had to count each one ten times. But I love it. I would not go back home for worlds. Mother often asks me if I want money, and I tell her I want nothing in the world. And we are married seven years at that. My people are perfectly satisfied now, although they acted as if the world would come to an end when I told them I was going to marry a poor boy. Mother predicted it would be all right until I wanted $50 and was handed 50 cents. Well, I have never wanted $50. And I get $50 worth of happiness out of every 50 cents. So maybe I have discovered something. Anyway, I am happy. TESS."

YOUR NAME
What Does It Mean?

"Cecil Stoddard" means "Blind Horse-keeper."

"Basil Mauser" means "Royal Mole-catcher."

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

The family name "Nichols" is found with a great variety of spellings in the earliest English documents. It means "the son of Nicolas." "Nicolas" is ultimately of Greek origin, and means "victorious people" or "victorious army." The Hundred Rolls mentions a William Nicoll, a John Nicole and a Stephen Nichole.

The family name "Gilchrist" is of Celtic origin, being a modern shortened form of the original "Mac Giolla Chriost," which means "the son of the servant of Christ." In a few cases, however, it stands for the Gaelic "Cill Criosd," meaning "Christ Church," and was first given as a family name to persons who lived near a chapel dedicated to Christ. "Gilchrist" is common in both Ireland and Scotland. On the Isle of Man is is generally spelled "Gilchrseat."

The family name "Meusel" is of German origin, and means "the little mouse." It was originally given as a nickname to persons who were especially quick and nimble.

The family name "Ely" may be traced back to two different sources. In many cases it is the modern form of the Anglo-Saxon place-name "Aelig," which means "the eel-island." Many families which bear this name have received it because of a former residence in the City of Ely, Cambridgeshire. Frequently, however, "Ely" stands for the old French "Elie," which is equivalent to the English "Elias." "Elias" is ultimately of Hebrew origin, and may be translated "God the Lord," or "Jehovah Is God." Common thirteenth century spellings of this name are "Elie" and "Elye."

Boris, Bride Reach Sofia; Shooting at Train Denied

Holiday Declared in Capital to Greet Ruler and Queen Giovanna; Nuptial Benediction of Holy Synod of Bulgarian Orthodox Church Bestowed on Pair.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Czar Boris III of Bulgaria today brought home his Italian bride, Queen Giovanna, to the capital of their kingdom and both received in Sofia cathedral the "nuptial benediction" of the holy synod of the Bulgarian Orthodox Church.

Sofia's day of festivity and rejoicing was clouded only by foreign reports that seven shots had been fired at their royal train as it brought the king and queen up from the Black Sea port of Bourgas.

The reports were denied, and the people whole-heartedly entered into the national welcome for the sovereigns, climaxing it tonight with a great display of fireworks and the booming of cannon.

Apparently happy but obviously tired, the 22-year-old queen watched the people making merry in the streets this evening. There was no work done in Sofia today, nor will there be tomorrow, which is the feast of St. Ivan Rilsky. This saint's day is considered also the fete of the queen, since her name is the feminized form of this patron saint's.

The ceremony in Sofia cathedral, a solemnization rite for the people of Bulgaria, took place soon after the royal couple reached Sofia.

The national rather than the sectarian character of it was emphasized by the attendance of the chief rabbi of Bulgaria and the chief Mufti, religious leader of the Mohammedans in Bulgaria.

The exchange of rings and certain other ritual details of the orthodox service were omitted, but the fact that the crowns of marriage were held over the heads of the king and queen, and that they drank out of the same communion chalice and both kissed the gospel afterward, was accepted by Bulgarians as compliance with the essentials of the orthodox rite.

In the course of this ceremony the young queen pointedly made the sign of the cross in Catholic fashion. Czar Boris made it in the orthodox manner.

Otherwise Queen Giovanna complied with all the outward formalities of the state religion, as benefited Bulgaria's new queen.

Despite the fact that the president of the synod, speaking after the ceremony, congratulated Boris on "founding at last the real orthodox dynasty" desired by the Bulgarian Church, observers had little doubt that the queen intended to adhere to the religion in which she was brought up.

The representative of the Vatican, Mgr. Roncalla, papal nuncio, did not attend the cathedral service, but was present at the railway station in his capacity of dean of the diplomatic corps.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

HOLLYWOOD.—The first time Hollywood has heard "morality clause" mentioned in ever so many years happened at a premiere.

Clara Bow.

Will Rogers was speaking, and somehow he got around to the Clara Bow rubber check incident, as every one hoped he would, without mentioning any names.

"You know," he said, indirectly referring to his reported introduction of Clara to a gambling resort owner, "I signed a new contract the other day and they insisted on a morals clause. Gotta keep me out of trouble."

It was all in fun, but nevertheless it was a reminder that there was a time when the morality clause in movie contracts might be the end of any player who became a little careless of his or her good repute by some action frowned on by the scrupulously strict portion of the public.

The famous pronunciamento originated in the period of the Arbuckle trial and the Taylor slaying.

What It Said.

The original morals clause read: "The artist agrees to conduct himself with due regard to public conventions and morals and agrees that he will not do or commit any act or thing that will tend to degrade him in society or bring him into public hatred, contempt, scorn or ridicule or that will tend to shock, insult or offend the community or ridicule public morals or decency or prejudice the producer or the motion picture industry in general."

This has been put into nearly every long term agreement between star and studio.

Young players, regarded as more likely to become involved in disagreeable situations, always have the paragraph read to them when they sign a contract.

Studios Protected.

It is doubtful if the prevision ever has been exercised. Many stars have caused their companies trouble, and if relations have been severed there always has been some other ground than "morals."

Most contracts, although generally spoken of as being for three to five year periods, are renewable every six months. So if a player does anything that is liable to have a bad effect at the box office he can be quietly dropped at option time.

No doubt the morality clause will be eventually reduced to a mere formality, which it practically is now, but in any event the studio always is protected by the option system.

Republicans Report $29,748 and Democrats $7,000 in Final Tallies.

STATE CAMPAIGNS AIDED

(Associated Press.)

Final preelection statements, filed yesterday by the Republican and Democratic congressional campaign committees, showed additional expenditures of $29,748 for the Republicans and $7,000 for the Democrats.

The Republican group received $15,000 more from the G. O. P. national committee. The Democratic fund was made up principally of contributions of $5,000 from Morton L. Schwartz, of New York, and $2,000 from the M. J. Meehan Co., of New York.

The Republican group sent money into the following districts, in its drive for House members: New York, Twentieth, $1,000; West Virginia, First, $1,000; New Jersey, Third, Eighth, Ninth and Tenth, $1,000 each; Oregon, First, $1,000; Washington, First, $1,000; New Mexico, $500; Ohio, Twenty-fifth, $500; New York, Thirtieth, $500, and Indiana, Third, $500.

The Democrats sent their funds as follows: Allegheny County Democratic committee in Maryland, $500; R. F. Mitchell, State chairman, Iowa, $1,000; Colorado, First, $500; R. B. Ennis, of Maryland, $300; North Carolina, Ninth and Tenth Districts, $250 each; Wisconsin, Sixth, $250; Kansas, Second, Fifth and Sixth, $250 each; Nebraska, second, $250; Wyoming, $250; Texas, Fourteenth, $250; Utah, First, $250; Illinois, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth, $250 each; Missouri, Fourth, $250; Ohio, Sixth, Fifteenth and Sixteenth, $250 each; Indiana, Seventh, $250; New Mexico, $250, and Massachusetts, Fourteenth, $250.

The Republicans reported their total expenditures for the congressional committee, up to October 30, as $231,189. No total was submitted by the Democrats.

Other expenditures reported by the two committees went to office workers and for incidentals.

TWO CHILDREN FLEE GALLINGER HOSPITAL

her children came in, "blue all over with the cold," she immediately gave them a hot mustard bath and put them to bed, after which she telephoned to Gallinger to find out how it came to pass that patients were permitted such liberties.

"The nurse, who refused to tell her name, replied that she didn't have time to watch the children, and that they would be better off at home anyway," Mrs. Deavers declared. "She told me the children should be whipped severely and put to bed."

Mrs. Deavers claimed also that James Clyde was suffering from pleurisy when he was taken to the hospital, "but they didn't do a thing for him."

Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger, heretofore always easily accessible to newspaper men, last night could not be reached for questioning. Employes of the hospital at first refused to summon Dr. Bocock, and later insisted that he was not on the hospital grounds and that his whereabouts was unknown.

Dr. J. A. Kelk, assistant superintendent, drew the job of answering the reporter's questions. But before commutting himself, he laid the matter before Dr. Bocock by telephone, who told him to withheld nothing from The Post.

Dr. Kelk denied that the Deavers children had been placed in the same building with psychopathic patients. He said they were in the children's ward, which is in the administration building of the psychopathic group, which is more than 50 feet from the nearest of the three ward buildings.

He admitted freely that the children had left the hospital, but explained that they had made their escape during the dinner hour, when most of the nurses were in the dining hall, leaving only one or two to watch the patients. The nurses who remained on duty, he explained, probably were busy with children in one of the several cubicles which make up the ward, so that the children would have plenty of opportunity to slip down the stairs and out of the building unnoticed.

The clothing the children wore, he explained, was the usual clothing given to bed patients in the ward. The boy wore a pair of thin cotton pajama pants and a shirt, while the girl had a pair of bloomers and a waist. Shoes, stockings, hats and coats are not worn by bed patients, he remarked.

Questioned about the reply the nurse is charged with giving to Mrs. Deaver's inquiries, Dr. Kelk said he knew nothing of the circumstance, and that he did not know which nurse had answered the telephone.

He did read, however, from a report of the case signed by a nurse who stated that an unidentified aunt of the children had telephoned to say that they had returned home "safely and none the worse for their experience," and that Mrs. Deaver would visit the hospital the following day and sign the necessary "responsibility" slips relieving the hospital of responsibility since the children were to be kept out of Gallinger against the advice of the hospital physicians.

Dr. Kelk said he had no report indicating that either of the children had been suffering from pleurisy. He said that as soon as the children were missed from the word the police had been notified and a general alarm broadcast. Police of the Fifth Precinct stated last night they had been notified of the disappearance by the hospital, and that when they called at the Deaver home they were informed that the children had returned, which ended the police interest.

The assistant superintendent added that James Clyde had ben at Gallinger for examination once before, and that at no time previous had either of the children behaved in a manner to indicate the need for special surveillance.

OIL WELL MENACE TO OKLAHOMA CITY

conical bonnet, was being forged to drop over the bellowing maw of the well.

The guardsmen entered the area wearing wartime steel helmets and slickers as protection from the rain of oil. They were ordered out by Adjt. Gen. Charles Barrett after an appeal had been made by Sheriff Stanley Rogers for military aid to supplement the efforts of his staff and city fire and police forces.

The well is just outside the city limits but much closer to the heart of the city than the greater part of the residence districts. It is on the south bank of the North Canadian River, which bisects Oklahoma City.

Since motor trucks were not permitted in the area, household goods of the few who moved from the section were transported in wagons drawn over oil-slimed streets by mules or horses.

COLD WAVE HOLDS DIXIE IN FIRM GRIP

Snow Flurries and Freezing Temperatures Prevail Over Wide Area.

GULF COAST FOLK SHIVER

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Southern temperatures dipped to shivering levels last night and today, accompanied by snow flurries in three border States and heavy frost as far south as the Gulf Coast.

Weather Bureau indications were that the cold snap is in Dixie for a several days' stay.

In portions of Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia light snows fell. Louisville, Paducah, Mayfield, Hopkinsville and Harlan, Ky., reported snow, while at Bluefield, W. Va., an inch was recorded at noon. Snow was general in the Cumberland mountains. Flurries also fell at Knoxville, Nashville, Elizabethton and other Tennessee points. Freezing temperatures were noted in all the border States and as far south as northern Louisiana, Mississippi and Atlanta, where the mercury dropped to 32 degrees early today.

Along the Gulf Coast and at Pensacola and Apalachicola, in Florida, the temperatures ranged downward to 40 degrees. The mercury at Jacksonville went to 46. New Orleans reported a low reading of 47.

The frost caused little or no damage to crops, although tender plants were killed at some points. Heavy to killing frosts were forecast by the Weather Bureau for the South tomorrow.

ITALO-FRENCH ISSUE STIRRED BY GIBSON

Geneva, where optimism is always to the forefront, it is admitted that unless the French and Italians reach an accord, it will be impossible to formulate an acceptable draft treaty on disarmament for submission to the general disarmament conference.

Accorded With Views of Both.

Inasmuch as American suggestions that the troublesome issue of parity be shelved until 1936, are in accordance with the views enunciated by the French in the abortive discussions between Rebe Massibli, of France, and Augusto Rosso, of Italy, during the League of Nations assembly and also envisage the naval holiday suggested by the Italians at the same time, it is believed that a formula for agreement will be found.

Another powerful factor favoring Italian acceptance of the American suggestions is the desparate economic situation which is facing the Fascists as a result of the economic depression.

The French, for their part, would welcome a chance to divert funds to strengthening the defenses on their western front.

The New York World News Service's correspondent here also is informed that if the British, at the meeting of the preparatory disarmament commission, will couch their request for limitation of budgets in terms of reduction or limitation of "military expenditures," uncoupled with publicity, instead of "control" terminology, then the American delegation will be more likely to accept that means of curtailing war budgets.

French Premier Willing.

Paris, Oct. 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—When Prime Minister Andre Tardieu and Hugh S. Gibson, United States Ambassador to Belgium, who was acting under President Hoover's instructions, early this week talked over the possibility of France becoming a party to the section of the London naval treaty specifically limiting naval strength it is understood the French premier showed evident willingness to take such a step.

A total naval tonnage for this country of 560,000 tons—about half the British navy's tonnage—was advanced as a compromise figure on which France now appears likely to act in opening negotiations to make the London agreement a four-power pact, or a five-powered one, if Italy also comes in.

Tardieu has previously been unable to show any such intention as that at present attributed to him, it is reported, because Jacques Louis Dumesnil, minister of marine, has thus far been opposed to reducing France's naval program by so much as a single rivet. But Dumesnil has now been won over to a more compromising attitude.

Offer Held Likely.

It is increasingly likely, therefore, that after France has ratified its signature to the portion of the treaty already given at London she will make an offer in Washington, London and Tokyo through diplomatic channels to cut her naval program approximately to half the British fleet.

France is only willing to cut her program to a point which would bring it to half of the British tonnage, and therefore into conformity with the British two-power standard, if, as reported yesterday, she is able to maintain a provision permitting her to increase it after due notice in the event any other power—meaning Italy—should launch a naval program regarded here as menacing France.

News of Gibson's mission to the French and Italian governments has caused lively interest in Liberal circles here and misgivings among French Conservatives and big navy supporters. The question of this country signing the whole of the London treaty has become of immediate political importance in this country.

DR. WILFLEY IS NOW 20 YEARS IN CAPITAL

Pastor Will Observe the Anniversary Tomorrow in New Church.

WAS ACTOR IN HIS YOUTH

Twenty years ago Dr. Earle Wilfley came to Washington as pastor of Vermont Avenue Christian Church. Tomorrow he will preach his anniversary sermon in the National City Christian Church, one of the most beautiful churches in Washington.

Dr. Wilfley is one of the eloquent ministers in the city. As every one knows, at one time in his life he was an actor, but that was in his youth. He still has much of the dramatic in his public speaking, and once a year he gives an address on "Shakespeare," at which time he also reads some parts of one of the Bard of Avon's great dramas.

As president of the Washington Federation of Churches, Dr. Wilfley was prominently before the public on many occasions, and it is said of him by disinterested judges that he is one of the readiest talkers that has filled a Washington pulpit in a generation.

Of some dear old Greek or Roman—maybe it was a Pagan—it was said: "If you would see his monument, look about you." How true this is of Dr. Wilfley, for the marble temple in which his people will from now on worship is his monument. His vision and his planning and his energy through the years have kept the project alive and it is fitting that he should be pastor in that house.

D. R. B.

Californian in Pulpit.

Dr. John H. Doermann, of Long Beach, Calif., will fill the pulpit of Grace Lutheran Church tomorrow morning.

National Advertisers To Meet in Washington

Two-hundred and sixty-five million dollars in annual advertising appropriations will be represented in the convention of the Association of National Advertisers to be held in the Wardman Park Hotel November 10, 11, 12.

Questionnaires recently mailed to the members of the association revealed that 60 are planning increases in their advertising budget during the coming year, while 145 will make no reductions from their last year's budgets. Only 14 companies reported contemplated reductions.

SENTENCE SERMONS

By DR. SAMUEL JUDSON PORTER

(Pastor of First Baptist Church.)

THE JOYOUS NOTE.

"FEAR not: for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy." "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Almost the first thing to greet us in the New Testament is an angel's song. What symphony must we expect, with this song as the prelude? Can a religion of joy and good will be translated into terms of human conduct, and to the solving of the problems of civilization?

The fruit of the spirit of Christianity is love, joy, peace—and perhaps joy most of all. Nowhere else is the genius of the Christian religion more truly revealed than in the parable of the Prodigal Son, which begins in the minor key and gradually rises to the major, until it culminates in a great merry-making.

On the night before he died Jesus talked with his friends about joy, and told them to be of good cheer. In the New Testament you hear very little of the families huddled together in their desolate little homes, bewailing their hard lot and trembling with fear, but a great deal about the saints in glory, and the sunshine, and the splendor of God. They lived a joy and fellowship which gave them a sense of victory.

Michelangelo once indignantly demanded of his fellow painters why they kept filling the galleries with endless pictures of Christ in weakness, Christ upon the cross, Christ dying, most of all Christ hanging dead, declaring that to the end of unending eternity Christ is alive, ruling and triumphing.

That is the tonic we need to keep us healthy, to fire our blood, to send us out into our turmoiling world ready and eager to face anything, with the note of joy in our souls, the tingle of good will toward all men in our hand-grasp, and the song of peace on our lips unafraid because the feel of victory is in the air and our hearts thrill to it.

Big "Family Day" Planned at Asbury

Every Sunday should be "family day" at church, but it is not, and because it is not, Dr. J. J. Rives, pastor of Francis Asbury Methodist Church (South), has dedicated Sunday, November 9, to that institution. He will break the bread of life in a peculiar way for his people on that day.

Church Will Revive Singing Gospel Hymns

Gunton Temple Presbyterian Church tomorrow night will revive an old custom that has not quite become extinct. The congregation will join with the choir in singing some of the familiar old-time gospel hymns—"the kind our God-fearing parents used to sing," the pastor, Dr. Bernard Braskamp, says.

ST. STEPHEN'S WILL DEDICATE CHAPEL

Service Tomorrow One of Many Activities of Month of Episcopalians.

MISSIONERS ARE COMING

The Chapel of the Incarnation will be dedicated as a part of St. Stephen's Church tomorrow at the 11 o'clock ... by the Rev. George Fiske Dudley, rector of the church, to the memory of the late Rev. William Taylor ... Mr. Snyder, who served the ...rnation Church, at Twelfth and N ...ts northwest, for more than ...nty-six years, was also canon of ...e Washington Cathedral at Mount ...t. Albans. At the time when the ...arish of the Incarnation joined that of St. Stephen's it had been established 58 years and its early register records the names of many persons prominent in national and city affairs at the time when the city was recovering from the Civil War.

The memorial stained glass windows, made in England and Germany a half century ago, have been brought from the old church to beautify the chapel. The paintings and carvings by Johannes Oertel have been restored and installed.

As the front of the chapel is smaller than the chancel of the Church of the Incarnation was, several changes have been made in the reredos. Lynch Luquer, a former vestryman of the old church and an authority on church architecture, has generously given his service in designing the present reredos with parts of the reredoses of the chancel and baptistry of the church on N street and has modified their architecture to conform to that of St. Stephen's Church.

The General Mission.

November will be a busy month in the diocese in which Washington is located. From the 16th to the 23d, inclusive, a general "mission" will be conducted in all the churches, though not in all the church buildings. The congregations of several parishes are combining, using the largest and most centrally located church for the meetings, but each parish is making a special effort to enlist its entire membership in not only turning out themselves, but in bringing in their friends and neighbors.

Within the Northwestern section of the city Epiphany, St. Thomas, St. Stephen's, St. John's of Georgetown, and All Souls' have services for the entire week, and St. Andrew's and Ascension for four days.

Among the missioners are some of the most notable dignitaries and gifted speakers of the church in the entire United States: The Right Rev. ... S. Quinn, Bishop of Texas; the Right Rev. William P. Remington, Bishop of Oregon; the Right Rev. R. ... L. Strider, Bishop Coadjutor of West Virginia; the Right Rev. Irving ... Johnson, of Colorado; the Right Rev. H. B. Abbott, Bishop of Lexington; the Right Rev. S. B. Booth, Bishop of Vermont; the Right Rev. ... T. Dallas, Bishop of New Hampshire; the Right Rev. Philip Cook, Bishop of Delaware; Father S. C. Hughes, not to mention Dr. John Rathbone Oliver, chief medical officer of the supreme bench of Baltimore, warden of Alumni Memorial Hall of Johns Hopkins, professor of the history of medicine at the University of Maryland. Not all the assignments are definitely determined, but it has been decided that Dr. Oliver will be the speaker at St. Thomas' Church.

Ascension's Good Rector.

The Rev. Thomas W. Cooke, rector of the Church of the Ascension, begins the ninth year of his pastoral duties in that church tomorrow. Mr. Cooke came to this church eight years ago from Dayton, Ohio, where he had served for fifteen years building churches and missions for the diocese of southern Ohio.

Under his leadership Ascension Parish has grown and developed until it is again one of the strongholds of the diocese of Washington. Among the unique features is a Chinese Sunday school.

Armistice Sunday.

On Armistice Sunday, November 9, at 11 o'clock, at Grace Episcopal Church, Georgetown, there will be a special memorial service, with flag pageantry. The topic for this service is "The Spirit of the Cross." The flag pageant which comes at the close of the service will emphasize the Christ spirit through the ages. The pageant, which will be somewhat similar to that given at this service for the past two years, will be under the direction of Mrs. Fulton Lewis, of Georgetown. The Rev. M. M. Perkins is the rector of Grace Church.

United Thank Offering.

The fall presentation service for the United thank offering of the women of the Episcopal Church in the diocese of Washington was held at Christ Church, Georgetown, Sunday at 3 p. m. The Rev. John Temple, the new rector, formerly of Winona, Minn., delivered the address.

The United thank offering is a Nation-wide fund contributed to by women of the Episcopal Church and used for the support of women workers in the mission fields in America and in foreign lands. In each church there is a parish custodian for this offering and every woman is asked to contribute from time to time as an expression of thankfulness for blessings received.

In the diocese of Washington gifts for this fund are presented each spring and fall. At this service the parish custodians presented the money that has been received since last March.

Church to Consecrate Box for Missionaries

Church fellowship night will be observed Thursday evening at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church at which time there will be a consecration service for the Christmas missionary box sent by the members and friends of the church to its missionaries in the Philippine Islands. At the close of this consecration service there will be held a reception to the new members of the church.

The committee in charge consists of T. D. Martin, Mrs. C. O. Goodpasture and Miss Anne Southard Larner. Following the reception refreshments will be served.

Smith Professor at Howard U.

J. Seelye Bixler, professor of religion and head of the department of religion in Smith College, Northampton, Mass., will be the speaker at the Howard University religious service at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Andrew Rankin Chapel.

Bostonian to Speak to League.

Dr. Robert C. Dexter, of Boston, secretary of the department of social relations of the American Unitarian Association, will be the speaker Thursday evening at the meeting of the Washington Chapter of the Unitarian Laymen's League. His subject will be, "The Fruit of the Loom."

Presbyterian Church Nears 150th Birthday

This historic old church in Georgetown soon will have its 150th birthday. Inset—The Rev. Frank Sargeant Niles, the minister.

Georgetown Parish Has Included Noted Group of Worshipers.

By DAVID RANKIN BARBEE.

In a very short time now the Georgetown Presbyterian Church will be celebrating its sesquicentennial, which means, in plain language, that it will be 150 years of age.

Five years ago the 145th anniversary of its founding was the occasion of an unusual celebration, at which the late Dr. Wallace Radcliffe, one of the Presbyterian saints, preached a remarkable sermon on "The Spirituality of the Almanac."

While Rock Creek Episcopal Church is the oldest congregation in the District of Columbia, and a Lutheran Church was in existence at Georgetown when the celebrated Dr. Stephen Bloomer Balch erected the first Presbyterian altar there, it can hardly be disputed that historically the Georgetown Presbyterian Church is the oldest church in continuous existence within the old confines of the Federal City.

Had Noted Worshipers.

If a church could be said to have breeding, this ancient temple was royally bred, and in its day many of the most celebrated men in the history of our Nation have either been pewholders there or have worshiped there. On one occasion George Washington and Dame Martha drove up in a coach and four and sat through the service. I suspect that they had come in to dine with Mr. John Peter, one of the original trustees of the church, who married Father George's sister, and that they spent the day in good old Virginia fashion by going to worship in the church of the Peter family.

Thomas Jefferson, when President of the United States, and Albert Gallatin, his Secretary of the Treasury, contributed to the building fund raised during the former's term; and Andrew Jackson, while a senator from Tennessee, had a pew there. While President he had a pew in what is now known as New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, but when the minister tattled about pretty Peggy O'Neal, he sent for him, demanded his proof, got none, gave the minister a piece of his mind and took a pew in another church. Tradition says that it was the old First Presbyterian Church, but it may have been Georgetown.

For the first two or three decades of the existence of the Federal City, this old church was the leading church of Washington, and for several years it was the only church in Georgetown. In a very definite sense it might be called the mother church of that ancient city, for communicants of several Protestant faiths worshipped there, and when they lived and organized their own congregations, they used the Georgetown church until they could erect their own temples.

Episcopal Church Erected.

In 1805 St. John's Episcopal Church was erected, and Dr. Balch not only encouraged it, but contributed, along with other Presbyterians, to its building fund. Had not the Episcopalians done the same for the Presbyterins? So what was strange in this? In 1818 another Episcopal church, Christ Church, was organized, and it used Dr. Balch's church, and when Dr. Balch was building a new church his congregation worshipped, by invitation, in Christ Church and the rector of Christ Church. According to the records, officiated with Dr. Balch in dedicating the new Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

In 1828 the Methodist Protestant congregation was formed in Georgetown and it was actually organized in the Presbyterian church and used that house as a place of worship until it could erect its own. This also happened with the parent Methodist church, which was organized April 6, 1806.

From this swift summary of the church history of Georgetown it is perfectly plain that there was no narrow sectarianism in Georgetown 150 years ago and for some years thereafter.

Just when Dr. Balch organized his little band of Presbyterians is not definitely known. All of the records of the church were burned when his house was destroyed by fire in 1831. But the date has been approximated and it was "about the latter part of 1780."

Had Only Seven Members.

There were but seven members, and for years but one ruling elder, Mr. James Orme, who was the son of the Rev. James Orme, formerly the pastor of the Presbyterian church at Upper Marlboro, the cradle of Presbyterianism in America.

Thus Upper Marlboro church was founded by Col. Ninian Beall, and it was afterwards moved to Bladensburg and then to Hyattsville. Its pastor at Bladensburg, the Rev. John Brackenridge, founded the ancestor of the old First Presbyterian Church in Washington. Dr. Balch married Col. Beall's great grand-daughter.

It was as a missionary that Dr. Balch came to Georgetown, and one of his first acts was to establish a classical academy for boys. This was a phase of the polity of the Presbyterian Church that seems to have almost become extinct. There are still to be found in Maryland one or two of those ancient classical academies that were established and taught by Presbyterian ministers, but their services now are given to poor boys and they have lost much of their time-honored excellence.

Dr. Balch taught his school for many years, in addition to ministering to his congregation, and during that period he typed the culture of Georgetown, a culture that lingers with delightful fragrance even to this day. He was himself a Princeton graduate, a student of the celebrated Dr. John Witherspoon, whose monument stands on Connecticut avenue in front of the Church of the Covenant.

Served for 52 Years.

For 52 years this good man broke the bread of life to his congregation, building for them two and maybe three houses of worship. His first preaching place was a log church on High street, owned by the Lutherans. The present Georgetown Lutheran Church, at the corner of Wisconsin avenue and Volta place, occupies that site. His next meeting place was the schoolhouse at the corner of Bridge and Market streets, now Thirty-third street, near O street. This later become the site of the Market Street Chapel, and is now occupied by St. John's Episcopal Church.

A permanent location at the corner of Bridge and Washington streets (now M and Thirtieth) was bought, and on it a small frame building was erected. In 1821 this was torn down and a brick church erected. This is the church to which Thomas Jefferson subscribed $75. This church had three galleries, one opposite the pulpit, used for the choir, which was without an organ (the only instrument used was a big bass viol) on the west side was the gallery for the colored people and that on the east side for the overflow from the seats below.

"The pews were unvarnished, rather old-fashioned, yet not uncomfortable. The floors were laid with squares of brick, while large stoves, located at the entrance, furnished the heat."

In 1879 the church was again moved, this time to the present site, P street, near Thirty-first. As much of the material used in the old brick church as could be preserved was incorporated in the new one. The chapel adjoining the church was the gift of Mr. R. S. T. Cissel, of Georgetown.

Record of Pastorates.

To complete the historic record of this church it is well to give the names of the pastors and their length of service. They are:

Dr. Stephen Bloomer Balch, 52 years.
The Rev. John C. Smith, 5 years.
The Rev. R. T. Berry, 10 years.
The Rev. John M. P. Atkinson, 7 years.
The Rev. John H. Bocock, 6 years.
The Rev. Fred T. Brown (1862-65), 4 years.
The Rev. A. A. E. Taylor, 5 years.
The Rev. David W. Moffett, 2 years.
The Rev. Samuel H. Howe, 11 years.
The Rev. Thomas Fullerton, 9 years.
The Rev. William C. Alexander, 16 years.
The Rev. James C. Marshall, 22 years.
The Rev. Frank S. Niles, 1930.

The present minister is a native of Nebraska, a graduate of Princeton, and was for sixteen years, 1913-29, a missionary to China. His father, grandfather and great-grandfather were Presbyterian ministers.

Mrs. Niles is the daughter of a Methodist medical missionary. She was educated at Lauzanne, Switzerland, at Alleghany College and at Bryn Mawr. She taught two years at Alleghany College. Her health broke down on the mission fields, and that is why Mr. Niles is in this country.

Church Will Observe Greek Independence

The centenary of the independence of Greece will be commemorated at the First Congregational Church tomorrow night, when the Greek Envoy, Dr. Charalambos Simopoulos, after an introduction by Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, will make an address, welcoming the gathering.

A large vested chorus, under the direction of Ruby Smith Stahl, will sing. The address of the evening will be made by Achilles Catsonis, esq., who is the Supreme Secretary of Ahepa. His subject will be "Americans and Greek Independence." This speaker, who is one of the most eloquent Greeks in America, was professor of oratory at his alma mater, the University of Syracuse, which position he resigned four years ago to become the supreme secretary of Ahepa. The name of this national fraternity is the initial letters of the words American Hellenic Educational Progressive Association, whose membership is composed of the leading Greek citizens of America.

All Souls' Unitarian To Observe Anniversary

All Souls Unitarian Church tomorrow will celebrate the anniversary of the organization of the Unitarian Church, which took place on November 11, 1821.

It will also hold its annual homecoming service in the morning, and at 8 o'clock in the afternoon there will be a communion service in memory of All Souls',

CALVARY METHODIST WILL FEATURE MUSIC

Leonard Davis Will Sing at Evening Service With Full Choir.

MEN ARE AIDING PASTOR

At the evening service tomorrow at the Calvary Methodist Church, Columbia road near Fifteenth street, an opportunity will be afforded to hear Leonard Davis, baritone soloist. Music will also be rendered by the full chorus choir under the direction of Louis Potter.

The fifteen-minute song service feature of these evening services, under the leadership of Dr. H. M. Dudley, which feature was inaugurated one month ago and has proved to be so popular with the congregation, will be continued tomorrow. This is one feature of the service in which every one can participate and it has been interesting to note that, almost without exception, the entire audience takes advantage of the opportunity and joins heartily in the singing.

A committee of men of the church has been formed to assist in the Sunday night services and it is the purpose of this committee to cooperate with the minister, Dr. Mark Depp, in every way. In their effort to help the people, the minister and the committee are, this Sunday, asking the members of the congregation to help them by answering four questions. These are the questions and it is anticipated that a large number of answers will be received:

1. What sermon subject would you like to have the minister discuss?
2. What question would you like to have the minister answer?
3. What song would you like to have included in the song service?
4. What suggestions will you offer, relative to the evening service, for the consideration of the committee?

The main feature of any service at Calvary Church is the sermon by Dr. Depp, his subjects always being interesting and developed in an unusual way. As noted from the questionnaire above, the congregation will have opportunity to make suggestions along this line and no doubt full consideration will be given by the minister to these suggestions. Dr. Depp's subject tomorrow night will be "Our Lawless Heritage."

The laymen who will assist in the service tomorrow evening are Dr. Sherwood D. Shankland, who will read the scripture; Mr. Robert E. Bondy, who will offer the prayer, and H. Guy Taylor, who will make the announcements.

Capital Revivals Draw Big Crowds

Three Being Conducted; Two in Church and One in Tent.

Washington's three revivals go ahead with sanctifying grace. Evangelist Charles H. Ashman, of Johnstown, Pa., will be held at First Brethren Church for another week. Large crowds have been attending these services, one feature of which is a question box conducted by the minister. Gospel music is used.

Carey Barker, the lay evangelist, who is filling the Fifth Baptist Church night after night, will speak to men only tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Boys over 12 will be admitted.

The Rev. Joe Jeffers is expounding the law and the gospel to sinners and saints alike in a tent at Rhode Island avenue and Second street northwest, and also broadcasting daily over WJSV. Tomorrow night he is going to tell the folks "Why God Killed a Prominent Church Official in One of the Leading Churches." This man's name probably begins with the first letter of the alphabet. The As have been a rather sinful tribe from Father Adam on to now.

Dr. William A. Ross, for 30 years head of the Union Theological Seminary in Mexico City, will preach tomorrow evening at the Church of the Pilgrims. That institution has had a long and honorable career. It is nonsectarian, belonging to all the Protestant churches that have organized missions in Mexico. Dr. Ross is the outstanding man connected with it.

Some time ago he took a much needed vacation, going to Palestine and other shrines dear to Christians, and while on this journey his health broke down, since which time he has been recuperating in a nursing home in Washington.

Now completely restored in body, he is about to return to his life work, and before going will preach in a number of churches.

MISSIONS INSTITUTE LARGELY ATTENDED

Interdenominational Gathering Held in Week at First Congregational.

PLANS TO HAVE ANOTHER

At the Interdenominational Missionary Institute held during the week at First Congregational Church, the attendance exceeded all expectations, about 250 being present at the luncheons daily, in addition to scores of women who attended the sessions during other hours. The devotional services were conducted by Mrs. H. E. Beatty, of Georgetown; Mrs. David W. Lum and Mrs. D. C. Gordon, of Mount Rainier.

Two of the foremost mission study teachers in the country were present, Mrs. W. H. Farmer and Mrs. John Ferguson, holding two classes each during the three days of the meeting.

At the closing session greetings were brought by Judge Kathryn Sellers, of the Juvenile Court, where the Federation of Churches maintains a worker supported by the women; she expressed her satisfaction because of the assistance given her court during the last five years. Dr. J. H. Hollister, of Chevy Chase, chairman of the advisory committee of the hospital worker, told of the service being rendered by Mrs. Elizabeth W. Murray. On the previous days Mrs. Murray had told her own story about the enterprise in which she is engaged. Mrs. Lorna W. Smith, the Juvenile Court worker, had likewise given an account of her activities.

Dr. A. R. Bird, president of the federation, expressed the appreciation of that body for work being done by the Women's Council, under whose auspices the institute was being held. The closing address was delivered by the Rev. S. C. Michelfelder, of Pittsburgh, secretary of the Lutheran Inner Mission of that city, "On the Interdenominational Heart of the Churches." It was a presentation of what the churches ought to do in social service work in a great modern city.

Mrs. Harvey S. Irwin, president of the council, was chairman of the institute, and Mrs. W. L. Darby is chairman of the missionary committee which had the arrangements in charge. It was voted to hold another similar institute next fall.

DRY SEES GROWING PROHIBITION FAVOR

Poll in Congress Is Belittled by Ernest Cherrington in Statement.

ONLY WETS REPLY, VIEW

(Associated Press.)

Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, said in a statement last night there has been no reversal of public opinion on prohibition "but rather a continuously growing support of the dry policy."

The statement was issued in answer to the announcement last Tuesday by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment that 371 replies to 823 questionnaires it sent to congressional candidates to ascertain their prohibition views showed 265 for and 99 against repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

This announcement, Mr. Cherrington said, demonstrated that "over two-thirds and possibly four-fifths of the candidates for the House and the Senate are probably supporters of prohibition."

"According to the admission of the wets themselves," he added, "only 371 candidates responded to the questionnaire sent out to 823 candidates, 452 candidates ignoring the inquiry. It is hard to believe that any enemy of prohibition or ardent friend of repeal would lose the opportunity thus afforded him of making clear his position upon this question, especially to the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, unless he were quite certain that a wet declaration would jeopardize his election in a dry State or congressional district.

"In other words, these 452 who probably threw the wet questionnaire into the waste basket were either convinced believers in prohibition or else recognized the political unwisdom of making any statement which might be interpreted as unfriendly to the eighteenth amendment.

"Less than one-third of the candidates queried gave replies which might be interpreted as favoring repeal of the eighteenth amendment. According to the wet statement, there were 265 such replies. Of these, 162 were stated as coming from the Northeastern seaboard and Great Lakes States. It has long been commonly admitted that the greater part of such wet sentiment as exists is located along the Atlantic seaboard."

Oath to Condemn Land Taken by Capital Group

Rudolph Jose, president of the Chamber of Commerce, Frank S. Pohanka, Audley A. P. Savage, Joseph A. Berberich and Joseph H. Dierken were sworn in before Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat in District Supreme Court yesterday to condemn land in squares 257 and 258, which is wanted by the Government in the triangle program. The property is located on Fourteenth, Thirteen-and-one-half, C and D streets northwest.

Chief Justice Wheat ordered Marshal Edgar C. Snyder to take the jury to view the property on November 7, and fixed November 13 as the date of the court trial.

Man's Plea for Divorce Charges Abandonment

Mathias A. Mandley, of M street northeast near Twenty-sixth street, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to grant him an absolute divorce from his wife, Mrs. Edith M. Mandley, of Veazy street northwest near Thirty-sixth street, who three years ago obtained a limited divorce from him.

Mandley charges that his wife has been unfaithful, and alleges that she has abandoned him and their two children despite the fact the court in the limited divorce action granted her custody. The Mandleys were married October 4, 1919.

Judge Frees Student In Auto-Permit Case

Judge Ralph Given showed his sympathy for college students who work their way through school when he took the personal bond of Russell G. Servis, 23 years old, not to drive without a permit again.

Servis, who is a student at the University of Maryland, told the court that he had recently secured a position with the University tailor shop, and was driving their truck without a permit when he could not raise the money to pay for one. This information was given after he had received a sentence of $10 or ten days, which he was not able to pay.

Mrs. William Adams Slade will preside at the dinner, which is being arranged by Miss Saida L. Hartman, Miss Elsie J. Bunting, Miss Jean Campbell, Miss Marie Corell and Miss Edith Dawson.

Former Bookkeeper Up for Sentence Today

Edgar Jacobs, former bookkeeper of the Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation and the Paramount-Publix Corporation, will face Justice Peyton Gordon today for sentence on an indictment charging him with embezzlements totaling more than $10,000.

Jacobs pleaded guilty several days ago. Officials are said to have told police that Jacobs' defalcations would exceed $70,000. They are alleged to have extended over a period of years.

PHI BETA KAPPAS HEAR DEAN POUND

Harvard Faculty Member Talks on Philosophy as Guide in Life.

SEES ALL ERAS SIMILAR

Dean Roscoe Pound, of the law school at Harvard University, a member of the National Law Observance and Enforcement Commission appointed by President Hoover, addressed the Phi Beta Kappa Association of Washington last night at the University Club.

Taking as his subject "Philosophy as a Guide," Dean Pound described the influence of philosophy and other subjects on various generations, and showed that the results were relatively he same in other eras as today

"This is not the first era to call itself disillusioned," he said. "It is possible that our disillusionment is a nightmare caused by trying to digest too much learning. What we may be waiting for is another Aristotle, who will assemble all this knowledge and present it in a way we can understand."

He was introduced by Dr. George E. MacLean, president of the association. Dr. McLean, while president of Nebraska University, taught Dean Pound.

It was decided by the association to invite five honor students from each college and university in and near the District to attend the meetings. A campaign will be launched to enroll other Phi Beta Kappas in the association. There are said to be 600 in the District possessing the honor key, while only about 200 belong to the association.

Gunners Warned Of Diseased Ducks

Sportsmen Told to Examine All Birds Killed as Season Opens.

A warning that a number of dead wild ducks, victims of an undetermined disease, have been found floating on the waters of the Potomac River was issued yesterday by the Department of Agriculture.

The warning was issued on the eve of the hunting season, which opens today. Sportsmen who operate duck blinds along the river were told that birds killed on the wing could be eaten without fear, but that birds killed on the water should be carefully examined.

Department pathologists found that the ducks inflicted with the mysterious disease suffered inflammation of the intestinal tract, apparently caused by intestinal parasites.

Woman's $10,000 Suit Cites Capitol Hill Trio

Suit for $10,000 damages against David S. Barry, sergeant at arms of the Senate, and two officers of the Capitol police force, was instituted in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Myra J. McCormick, of 1840 California street northwest, who charges that she was caused to be falsely arrested by the defendants on November 1, 1929.

Acting as her own attorney, the woman asserted that she was taken into custody by a Sixth Precinct policeman at the instance of Barry and the two Capitol officers, Capt. Stephen J. Gnash and Lieut. C. E. Stimmler. She claimed that she was next taken by a policewoman to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation and held "for a long time" until her release later in the day.

REBUILDING BEGINS AT SCENE OF QUAKE

Victims of Ancona Disaster Turn to Reconstruction; 17 Reported Dead.

SOME INJURED MAY DIE

Ancona, Italy, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—A new city is rising phoenix-like from the ashes of the Ancona laid waste by yesterday's series of earthquakes. The people who fled in terror as the earth rocked under their feet have turned to the job of reconstruction.

It was believed possible the toll of dead and injured might be somewhat larger than the official lists indicate, but the count remained at four dead here and thirteen at Senigallia, where the quake struck the heaviest blow. Public officials said in private they believed the Senigallia dead actually numbered 35 or more.

Some of the injured probably will die, too, for harassed physicians despair of saving the lives of all the 300 officially listed among the casualties.

Meanwhile, homeless hundreds already today had relegated the excitement of the quake to the background of conversation, and the talk was all about the task of rebuilding and repairing which faced them now.

New communities of makeshift sheds have sprung up overnight and parts of the stricken towns and villages look like boom mining towns of the American West. Temporary shelters of any kind have been built by those whose homes were wrecked by the earth shocks. Vast numbers of families who yesterday morning had a little stake in life today lined up in long queues to get a pot of soup or a tin of meat from Army field kitchens.

There can be no government appropriation for reconstruction until the council ministers meet next week, but it is taken for granted there will be some such plan as was adopted last July after the terrific quake in the Vulture region took 1,500 lives and caused enormous property damage.

We weren't satisfied with better woolens . . . we had to get best woolens. And the same thing happened with the tailoring. We gave the manufacturer enough business so that he could afford to sell a little bit less. We pared down our own profits. Now you can actually get a suit, that under ordinary conditions would cost at least ten dollars more, for $37.50. That's value for you.

His hat is made of wood;
His heart 's of stone; his manner flip;
But his morals—they are good.

GEORGETOWN UPSETS MICH. STATE IN NIGHT GAME, 14-13; V. P. I., GENERALS CLASH; MARINES READY FOR TERRORS; DARTMOUTH FAVORED TO BEAT YALE IN EAST'S FEATURE

Poly's Eleven Primed for Contest

Coach Neal Confident as Charges Finish Training.

Shifts In Line Have Strengthened Team; Backs Ready.

Special to The Washington Post.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Oct. 31.—Followed by scores of the football faithful, V. P. I.'s Eleven absorbed its final bit of field stategy this afternoon, and will leave for Lexington early tomorrow morning to be the homecoming guest at Washington and Lee in the twenty-eighth game between Tech and the Generals.

The final workout was brief and a welcome close to a week of intensive training. In short signal drills, Capt. Bird Hooper put the team through the varied assortment of potential touchdown makers to be hurled at the Generals tomorrow. Eleventh hour field instructions and rehearsal of formations for kick-off preceded Capt. Hooper's daily turn at punting and kicking goals.

Coach Orville Neal made it plain that V. P. I.'s team would trot out on Wilson Field with orders to spare not one weapon of attack. "The boys have a full assortment of plays, and they will use them," Neal said. "We are saving nothing for future games, for all four are hard, and all will demand everything we have. We will take the games as they come and hurl everything at our opponents."

Seamon and McIntire At Ends.

The V. P. I. line-up will be: Al Seamon and Johnny McIntire, ends; Bill Grinus and Harry Stark, tackles; Gene Hite and Earl Dyke, guards; Brown, center; Capt. Bird Hooper, quarter back; Phil Spear and Bus Hall, half backs; Frank Howard, full back. Six of the eleven men—Seamon, McIntire, Grinus, Hite, Hall and Howard—are sophomores. This is the same back field that faced Davidson, but line changes sent Stark and Grinus to the tackle berths, and Hite to guard in Stark's former place.

This new forward wall showed a world of aggressiveness in scrimmages this week. V. P. I. expects to face the Generals in the first big State test with a team that boasts new speed and power.

Chicago Racing Ends; Cog Air Wins Feature

Hawthorne Race Track, Ill., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Racing in Chicago came to a close today after 159 days of the sport before a crowd of 10,000 shivering fans at the historic Hawthorne course. The thoroughbreds will not return to Illinois until next May.

Cog Air, ridden by Jockey Buddy Hanford, won the Au Revoir Handicap, the feature, at one mile and a sixteenth, by two lengths. Battle Axe was second and Tonto Rock third.

Only five horses started. When the small field was sent away Cog Air, owned by Mrs. R. Pollard, of Texas, went to the front and Battle Axe followed in his wake. Tonto Rock did not display any of his former speed and at no time during the journey got to the front. Cog Air led the procession all the way and paid $6.52 to win, $4.16 to place and $2.48 to show.

Flossine Wins in Romp Under Ellis at Empire

Empire City Race Track, N. Y., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Philly Hyams Flossine, on a track that was exactly to her liking, scored easily in winning the mile and 70 yard event, third on the card. She was ridden by Ellis and the boy rode a good race by making a sprinter go a route. Flossine receded in the betting to 3 to 1, then was pounded down to 11 to 5.

The small field got away well and Flossine rushed to the front. Ellis rated the filly in front by a length or so to the stretch turn, where he brought her wide to the finish going. She then drew away towards by four lengths easily. Don Pedro beat Captain Hook four lengths.

MARYLAND U. SET FOR VIRGINIA

Old Liners Will Have Best Team Available Today.

MARYLAND will present its strongest line-up in the tilt with Virginia at Charlottesville this afternoon, although two or three of its players still are nursing bruises. However, the squad is in better trim than when it beat V. M. I. last week.

The Old Liners were to leave Washington this morning at 8:30 with a special train carrying faculty members, alumni and students leaving Baltimore at 9 o'clock, College Park at 9:30 and Washington at 10. This train also was to carry Virginia alumni in Washington.

Maryland Expecting Hard Battle.

Despite the fact that Maryland has made a better showing so far this year than Virginia, the Old Liners are not taking it for granted that they are going to beat the Cavaliers. In fact, they expect the game to be a hard battle in view of the fact that Virginia saved all of its leading players from the Kentucky contest and really has taken two weeks to prepare for Maryland.

Virginia eyes will be focused on "Bozie" Berger, Maryland half back, who wrought such havoc against V. M. I. last week, scoring three touchdowns in the first half and figuring prominently in the Old Liners' aerial attack. With Thomas, the Virginia ace, in fine fettle, a duel of stars is promised.

W. Maryland Will Risk Record

Service Eleven Aims for Victory by Air Route.

Sea Soldiers Boast One of Best Elevens of Recent Years.

WESTERN Maryland College stands its two-year undefeated record up as a target tonight before the fire of the Ali-Marines eleven in a game at Griffith Stadium that looms as one of the most thrilling of the local season. Action will commence at 8:15 o'clock.

Undefeated in 21 consecutive contests, winners of 17 straight, the Green Terrors from Westminster, Md., are coming down out of the mountains full of fight and confidence. They have heard a lot about how the Marines are intent on spoiling that record, and they are prepared to turn back the Devil Dogs' threat just as they turned back Georgetown's in 1929 and again two weeks ago.

Victory Means Much To Marines.

The Marines see in a victory tonight a chance to retrieve some lost football glory. By beating the crack eleven from Maryland's western hill country, the Leathernecks undoubtedly will gain recognition as one of the strongest teams in the East. Last year the Marine Corps gridiron stock fell heavily under pressure of several defeats in the worst season ever experienced by a Keady-coached team.

Coach Keady this season has built a Marine eleven comparable to the great teams of 1922 to 1925. It has won four out of five games to date, bowing only to Boston College, and then by only one touchdown.

Included in the Marine array are Dave "Peggy" O'Neill, former Naval Academy back field star; Orin Pressley, candidate for all-American center honors in 1928; Ken Truckenmiller, 185-pound former Cornell tackle, and Allen, a tackle product of the University of Florida.

Terrors Banking on Strong Defense.

Defending the Green Terror record, Coach Dick Harlow will send into action a team of rugged players already

MARA TELLS OF PART HE TOOK IN ARRANGING TUNNEY BOUT

NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Timothy Mara, politician, bookmaker and sportsman, opened the testimony today in his $500,000 breach of contract suit against Gene Tunney with the statement that the former heavyweight champion offered him 25 per cent of his share in the gate receipts and 25 per cent of his future earnings for Mara's help in arranging a match with Jack Dempsey in 1926.

Mara testified he told Tunney that the time of the year in which he discussed the matter with the boxer was his busiest period. "Why Tim there is enough money in this proposition for all of us," Mara testified Tunney answered. "If I am able to get the Dempsey match I will give you 25 per cent of my share of the gate and 25 per cent of what I make subsequently in pictures and other activities."

Gave Full Time to Tunney, Says Mara.

Mara said he told Tunney he was willing to take only 10 per cent of the purse, but if Gene won the title he wanted 25 per cent of his earnings from that time on and would give up his race track interests to work entirely for Tunney.

The court room of Justice Peter A. Hatting was crowded. Tunney sat at

NORTHWESTERN FAVORITE OVER MINNESOTA TODAY

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

CHICAGO, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Championship hopes of Northwestern and Minnesota either will be blasted or lifted to the heights in the resumption of football warfare in the Western Conference tomorrow.

These two teams, both undefeated in Big Ten competition, will battle it out, with the survivor left in the race along with Michigan for the title. The game will be the outstanding conflict of tomorrow's schedule and will be played before a capacity crowd of 54,000 at Minneapolis.

Meanwhile, the Wolverines, with three conference victories to their credit, will be idle and therefore will have no opportunity to either gain or lose ground, barring a tie, while the Gophers and the Wildcats will be fighting to eliminate the other.

An intersectional battle, which has developed into a great rivalry, will be resumed at Stagg Field between Chicago and Princeton, whose only claims to fame this season are to be found in the records of other years. Both elevens have been kicked around with abandon this fall, but despite the unimpressive showing of the two teams, there is background of color

VIRGINIA BACKS WHO FACE MARYLAND AND COACH

Little Forecasts Victories Today for Penn, Dartmouth, Fordham and Northwestern

Alabama Favored to Beat Kentucky by Columbia Coach.

By LOU LITTLE (Columbia Head Coach).

NEW YORK, Oct. 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—When Dartmouth and Yale come together at New Haven tomorrow, it perhaps will be the outstanding game of the day. Dartmouth comes undefeated and with a strong, powerful organization. They rely on power and have plenty of reserve man power to carry on in this style of attack. Yale will present a rigid defense, and if Dartmouth wins this game, as I believe they will, we can say that Dartmouth really stands out as perhaps the best of the Eastern aggregation.

Dartmouth has never defeated Yale at New Haven. There seems to be a psychological effect on Dartmouth when visiting New Haven; and for several years, when they have had the game well in hand, a blunder or even an unavoidable misplay has taken victory right out of their grasp. If Yale should be returned the winner, they will boost their stock from the midway mark to the very top.

YALE-DARTMOUTH — Two outstanding teams of the East. Hard battle, Dartmouth to win. PENNSYLVANIA-KANSAS—Kansas may be demoralized because of too much investigation. Penn should win. NEW YORK U.-CARNEGIE TECH—Carnegie's experience against New York's young back field. Very close game, but believe New York will win. FORDHAM-WEST VIRGINIA—Fordham will defeat the Mountaineers HARVARD-WILLIAM AND MARY—Just the right kind of a game for Harvard at this time. Will win by several touchdowns. BOSTON COLLEGE-MARQUETTE—An even choice. Marquette may surprise. BUCKNELL-PENN STATE—Bucknell should win. They are moving quite smoothly. CALIFORNIA-MONTANA — California will break back into the winning column again. CHICAGO-PRINCETON—Princeton should win this one. The Tigers may show to advantage during November. COLGATE—MISSISSIPPI COLLEGE—Not much to it but Colgate. DETROIT-IOWA—Detroit has a great team. They will keep their slate clean.

GEORGIA-FLORIDA — Georgia a little bit too strong for the Alligators. ARMY-NORTH DAKOTA—North Dakota will be stubborn but the Army to win with several touchdowns to spare. NAVY-WEST VIRGINIA WESLEYAN—Looks as though Navy has started. ILLINOIS-PURDUE—Hardly think Illinois is strong enough. Purdue to win. IOWA STATE-OKLAHOMA—Another one for the future Oil Kings of Oklahoma. JOHNS HOPKINS-HAVERFORD—Johns Hopkins KANSAS AGGIES-MISSOURI—A good game. Kansas Aggies should win. ALABAMA-KENTUCKY—Both undefeated. Alabama has too much power.

LAFAYETTE-UPSALA—Not much to it but Lafayette. LEHIGH-MUHLENBERG—Lehigh should win this one. MAINE-COLBY—Colby to win.

MINNESOTA - NORTHWESTERN—Minnesota will battle, but Northwestern a little too clever. NEBRASKA-PITTSBURGH—Still have faith in Pittsburgh. NORTH CAROLINA-GEORGIA TECH—Hard one to choose, but will take a chance on North Carolina. NOTRE DAME-INDIANA—Notre Dame will have a well-deserved rest. Their reserves can win this one. OHIO STATE-WISCONSIN—Looks bad for Ohio State. OREGON STATE - WASHINGTON STATE—Washington State should not stumble over this one. They will win, but will be forced. RUTGERS-HOLY CROSS—Holy Cross, after a tough time. SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA-DENVER—Southern California will have a breather after her great victory of last Saturday. SYRACUSE-BROWN—Two good lines. Syracuse to win because of better back field. TEMPLE-WAKE FOREST—Temple by several touchdowns. TENNESSEE-CLEMSON—Tennessee. TUFTS-NEW HAMPSHIRE — New Hampshire has too much power for Tufts. TULANE-MISSISSIPPI AGRICULTURAL—Tulane, without much trouble. VANDERBILT-MISSISSIPPI — Vanderbilt, without much trouble. VILLANOVA-DUKE—This will be a close battle but Villanova should win.

St. John's Departs For LaSalle Battle

St. John's departs this morning for Cumberland, Md., where its annual game against LaSalle Institute will be played tomorrow afternoon.

St. John's was turned back by the margin of 19-6 last year when they made the Cumberland jaunt but are counting on traversing the tables tomorrow.

LaSalle experienced not a great deal of trouble last week in beating Gonzaga.

MAYA NEVER HEADED IN MILE FEATURE AT LAUREL

66-to-1 Shot Triumphs in Opener

Backwoodsman, Riley Up, Leads Maidens All the Way.

Charioteer, Outsider in Chase, Scores Over Icicle.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.
Special to The Washington Post.

LAUREL RACE TRACK, Oct. 31.—W. R. Coe's Maya led all the way in the Nanticoke Purse, which featured the Laurel card today. He was coupled with Caesarina, which finished out of the money. Molasses Jane, from the Brann Castle Farm, was the contender all the way to the sixteenth, when she faltered and was beaten a nose for the place by J. E. Davis' Colossal.

The other four horses never figured in the running. All were backed, but the Coe entry was favorite. This victory of Leishman gave him a firm hold as the leading jockey at this meeting.

Maya broke in front and was followed to the first turn by Molasses Jane and Boot to Boot. On the back stretch, Boot to Boot dropped out of contention and Colossal vied with Molasses Jane for the place the entire trip. The time for the mile was 1:39 2-5. The winner paid $5.80.

Maya was much the best and the price was a long one, considering he was a standout in the field he met. The track was dry and dusty and fast. The largest crowd of the week was Backwoodsman Leads All the Way.

B. C. Hatch's Backwoodsman, paying $134.80, the longest priced winner of the meeting, won the first race, leading all the way, with G. Riley up. A field horse, All Told, carrying the M. R. Dulaney colors, was second and E. M. Byer's Yarrow was third. All were outsiders, the favorites being Principio, Guide Left and Earfull.

Riley took Backwoodsman to the front after the field had been delayed by Yarrow and coasted home by two lengths. Yarrow closed fastest of all, but was beaten for the place by a length. The time was 1:07 3-5 for 5½ furlongs. The race was for maiden colts and geldings, 2 years old. Twelve started.

Charioteer, Outsider, Captures Chase.

This appeared to be get-a-way day at Laurel when the longest priced horse in the Middleburg Steeplechase, emulating the longest shot in the first race, won. The successful horse was the Foxcatcher Farms Charioteer, which landed the $2,000 purse by a length from Mrs. K. E. Hitt's Icicle. Thomas Hitchcock's St. Vernon, Rigan McKinney up, was third.

Argonaut and Banner Day set the pace for a mile and a half. Argonaut quit and Banner Day hung in the stretch when pressed by Chariteer and Icicle. The last two came over the last hedge as a team, but R. Williams outrode Bellhouse on the flat run and won by a length. The winner paid $23.90.

Polly Play won the Lothair purse for 2-year-old fillies by eight lengths for the Lone Star Stable with A. Robertson up. Admiral Grayson's Bright Comet was second, five lengths in front of Mrs. Hitt's Madame Queen. Friaress ran out. Margaret Mc was the other starter. Polly Play was the first favorite to win. The My Play—Polly Pennant filly ran the 6 furlongs in 1:12 2-5. She paid $4.10. Polly Plays race moves her up among the fillies of her age.

Chatover Wins Sprint From My Sis.

The Savage Claiming Handicap at 6 furlongs proved another upset when G. F. Woodward's Chatover threw dust in the eyes of the favorites. William F. Schend's My Sis held the place, with Betty Beau, the favorite, third.

Betty Beau was not away well, but improved her position while Toki and My Sis were setting a fast pace on the back field. But on the stretch turn, Betty Beau was forced from the rail to the outside and in the meantime, Chatover got the breaks and was fighting to catch My Sis in the stretch, which he succeeded in doing at the sixteenth and got the decision by a neck. Betty Beau was beaten for the place by two and a half lengths. The winner paid $18.80. The time was 1:13. The horses were entered for the claiming price of $5,000.

ROCKSLIDE, racing in improved fashion and kept closer up than usual, finished stoutly the last half mile, disposed of KEITH inside the final furlong and was gradually drawing clear. KEITH set a good pace, shook off MERIDIANESE, but could not withstand the winner. JANE RHINEHART was well up all the way and held on well. BLUCH DINEEN was messed about early and could never reach the leaders. CORINNE STAR stumbled and fell at the first turn.

EASTERN HIGH showed its best form in the high school series yesterday under the leaden skies at Central Stadium before 2,000 shivering spectators, when it met Western's touted aerial attack with an air-tight defense and held the Red Jackets to a scoreless tie.

Besides exhibiting a defense quite the equal of the favored Western squad, Coach Kelley's young team pulled off most of the scintillating plays of the day, in Shorb's all-around defensive work, in McAboy's booting, Corridon's charging, and the manner in which Wells handled his team.

Ball in Midfield During Most Of First Half.

During the entire first half Western contented itself with straight football and found itself against a team doing just the same. The ball hung closely to midfield throughout most of the half, with only one real threat, when, after McAboy had gotten the best of Webb in the punting bout the two staged throughout the game, Eastern commenced operations on their opponents' 45-yard line. Flip Corridon broke loose on the first play for 28 yards through most of the Western Team to the Reds' 22-yard mark. Palmer and Wells were thrown for losses and the ball eventually fell into Western's hands on downs. Webb booted nearly 60 yards out of the hole.

Thereafter each team usually chose to punt on the first down, the ball kicking between the 30-yard lines with repeated regularity.

A stinging pass from Webb to Cruncher on the last play of the first half foretold Western's plan of campaign for the second half: the aerial attack which seriously threatened to down Central when Western met the Hill Dwellers two weeks ago on the same field.

Western Starts Aerial Attack In Final Half.

Rumors of the impending air disaster were freely circulated during the half, and materialized immediately after Western gained possession of the ball in midfield after holding the Easterners. But George Shorb, Coach Kelley's peppy center, was not reckoned with: He started a landslide of good defensive work in breaking up Western's passing when he intercepted two of the first three passes and grounded Lynham who caught the third.

With so many passes failing to find Western retrievers the game again developed into the unfruitful play which marked the first half. Stan Amidon kept Western in the game, despite consistently ineffectual passing by good line bucks.

Sawyer W. & L. Star As Va. Frosh Bow, 25-0

Special to The Washington Post.

Lexington, Va., Oct. 31.—The potential power of Coach Cy Young's Washington and Lee yearling eleven burst forth in all its glory here this afternoon as the Little Generals lifted the curtain to the home coming festivities by swamping the freshman team of Virginia, 25 to 0.

From the first minutes of the game, it was evident that Washington and Lee outclassed the Little Cavaliers. Joe Sawyer, former Oak Hill W. Va., star back, was a scintillating figure on Wilson Field, as he went over for two touchdowns and accounted for the ball being in position for another. Sawyer galloped 40 yards, and 22 more in the first period and added 20 more in the second, Sawyer's 55-yard run back of a punt to score in the last quarter brought spectators to their feet.

ALEXANDRIA, Oct. 31.—Art Ludlow was selected today to coach the St. Mary's Celtic Baseball Team for the 1931 season. Ludlow is one of the veteran ball players in the Virginia City and has played with the Celtics for the past five years. He also has performed with Milwaukee, Clarksburg and Raleigh.

Episcopal's High School Football Team will mix with Gilman Country School Gridders in Baltimore Saturday. Three other teams from the seminary's ill institution also will see action.

A benefit program has been arranged for Roland "Speed" Jones, local baseball star, who is recovering from a serious illness at Bluemont, Va. A dance and vaudeville entertainment will be presented at Lyceum Hall on November 26. Proceeds will go to the Alexandria boy.

Bob Brooking, former Episcopal High School star in 1929, is playing with the varsity team at Amherst College.

C. U. VICTORY PROMISED TODAY

Cards Mentally, Physically Fit for New River Today.

FOR the sixth time this season, Catholic University's eleven will try to cross the victory column this afternoon when it engages the undefeated New River State Team in Brookland Stadium, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. Having tasted nothing but defeat, some of it of the bitterest, the Cardinals should prove a tough bunch to handle.

This seems paradoxical, but the Cardinals have never let their collective upper lips soften, and the harder their assignment the harder they battle, as evidenced last week when they held the highly touted Duquesne Dukes to a 13-0 score at Pittsburgh.

Card Players Physically Fit for Game.

Together with this fine mental condition, the Cardinals today are physically fit. Johnny Oliver, star running back, has recovered from leg injuries, and adds strength to the attack, while the entire fiercely charging forward wall has never been in better shape except for once at the start of the season when Hugh Flynn, leading tackle, was available. Flynn is through with football on account of a broken leg.

New River State, coached by Ken Shroyer, former Western Maryland mentor, enters into the hardest part of its schedule in today's game. Next Saturday it opposes Holy Cross at Worcester, Mass.

Shroyer is bringing here a veteran team which last season dropped only one game in eight played. It boasts experience, weight and speed—three qualities that just about "make" a football team.

Although in previous games this season, the Golden Bears have not met strong opponents, the Brooklanders are not discounting their record. From Head Coach Dutch Bergman down to the lowliest sub, the local players anticipate a gruelling battle. But at the same time they nurse hopes of overcoming the obstacle to register Catholic's first victory of 1930.

County Soccer Title To Md. Park Booters

Maryland Park High School won the soccer championship of France Georges County High School League yesterday by dint of a 4-to-0 win over Oxon Hill on the Rosedale Field.

Established in 1925, Maryland Park's first soccer championship was achieved yesterday. In the course of the series it defeated the strong Hyattsville High, defending champions.

The teams really are playing for "double stakes," as last year's battle at College Park was a 13-13 tie.

Maryland's freshman team will entertain home fans who are unable to make the Virginia trip by playing the V. M. I. Yearlings at College Park this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. So far the young Terps, handled by Jack Faber and Al Heagy, two Washington boys who started for the Old Liners in three sports, have beaten the North Carolina and Virginia Cubs.

Abell Shuffles Line-Up For Maryland Clash

Special to The Washington Post.

University, Va., Oct. 31.—Virginia and Maryland will meet tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on Lambeth Field in a game which the Old Liners are doped to win, but one which the Cavaliers will battle not to lose until the final whistle.

Since the start of the season fortune has given somewhat different treatments to these two rival State university elevens. The Virginia line-up has been very different from week to week, while the Marylanders have used the same men in most of their contests.

Earl Abell, Cavalier coach, has been shifting his team A line-up all week in an effort to select the strongest combination of his charges. "Curley" Byrd, coach of the Terrapins, has announced that he will open up with about the same team that faced V. M. I.

Maryland's strength in the line gives them an edge over the Virginia eleven which has not shown power in the forward wall. On the other hand the Cavaliers have an excellent assortment of backs, though it remains to be seen whether these ball carriers are any better than the men who come from College Park.

Coach Abell had only a short workout on Lambeth Field this afternoon. Signals were run and the team was just limbered up before going back to the showers.

The probable line-up follows:

Virginia.	Position.	Maryland.
Condon	L. E.	Pease
Motley	L. T.	Fisher
DeButts	L. G.	Hayden
Reide	Center	Faber
Cameron	R. G.	Kraczovic

Alabama-Kentucky Game Features Dixie Card Today

By DILLON GRAHAM.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Alabama's red-shirted Behemoths, who have spoiled championship aspirations of Tennessee and Vanderbilt on successive Saturdays, plan to play their well-rehearsed giant killer role again tomorrow with Kentucky as the victim.

This early November spectacle dominates the Southern gridiron program tomorrow, although a brace of other games involving unbeaten conference teams rank close behind in general interest. At Savannah Florida meets Georgia, while in Knoxville Clemson's undefeated Tigers stake their hopes against a once-beaten but still powerful Tennessee eleven.

Alabama-Kentucky Teams Ready for Battle.

Late reports from the Kentucky battleground list both teams in near-perfect condition for their make-or-break contest. Ellis Johnson, Kentucky quarter back, is nursing minor hurts and Capt. Clements, Alabama tackle, has an injured foot, but both will be used.

More than 35,000 persons will watch this clash of two powerful lines and the scoring duel between Kelly, of Kentucky, and Suther, of Alabama, both leading candidates for sectional honor teams.

The game will offer Harry Gammage's Wildcats their first real test. Kentucky has bowled over three conference teams, but all were markedly inferior to the Lexington machine. Alabama, with proven power, must reach the zenith of its attack as shown against Tennessee and Vanderbilt if it succeeds in downing the Cats. Sheer force has brought the Crimson Tide victory in its earlier games; but if the running offensive is halted tomorrow, Coach Wallace Wade has a surprise aerial barrage ready.

By virtue of its impressive wins over Yale and North Carolina, Georgia figures stronger than Florida, upset last week by Furman, but observers point out that in their 1928 and 1929 meetings Florida won after starting from an underdog position.

Florida Given Chance to Beat Georgia.

Those close to Charles Bachman, the Alligator coach, admit he has pointed his team all season for Georgia. They expect Florida to offer the Georgians a great battle and would not be surprised by a Florida victory.

Experts find it hard to figure the Clemson-Tennessee tilt. Although crippled by loss of several regulars, Tennessee yet is rated one of the best elevens in the South. Clemson has won handily from six teams along the Atlantic Seaboard, but has yet to face real opposition.

Other conference games bring together Tulane, 1929 champions and the only other unbeaten conference team, and Mississippi A. & M. at New Orleans, Georgia Tech and North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N. C., Vanderbilt and Mississippi at Nashville, Maryland and Virginia at Charlottesville and Virginia Polytechnic and Washington and Lee at Lexington, Va.

Duke's Blue Devils lead five Southern teams into intersectional combat. Duke, victorious over the Navy in its first sally outside Dixie, plays Villanova at Philadelphia. Sewanee tackles Rice at Houston, William and Mary meets Harvard at Cambridge Mississippi College tries conclusions with Colgate at Hamilton, N. Y., and Wake Forest opposes Temple at Philadelphia.

Four teams venture outside the conference confines. North Carolina State battles Presybterian, S. I. A. A., leaders, at Asheville, N. C., Auburn tries Wofford at Auburn, Virginia Military deploys against Davidson at Lexington, Va., and Louisiana State, with Gov. Huey P. Long as a loyal rooter, has its twenty-fifth meeting with Arkansas at Shreveport.

In other important jousts, Furman plays Oglethorpe in Atlanta, and Centenary exchanges passes and kicks with the Texas Aggies at College Station, Tex.

ALEXANDRIA BEATEN BY W.-L. HIGH

2,500 See Ballston Eleven Turn in 20-0 Victory.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALLSTON, Va., Oct. 31.—Washington and Lee High School defended its honor as scholastic champions of Northern Virginia here today, when it used steam-roller tactics in defeating the Alexandria High School gridders, 20-0, in a Third District Conference game. More than 2,500 football fans braved the cold weather to watch the two traditional rivals battle and they were presented to a snappy game of football.

In the first quarter the Generals registered two touchdowns. Mortimer crashed over for the first score on an off-tackle play. A poor punt by the "Twins" had placed the Generals in a position to score. Later in the quarter, Stoneburner snatched an aerial heave from Mortimer over the Alexandrians' goal line for a touchdown.

Alexandria Rally Fails To Materialize.

In the third period, the Ballston boys made their final score. After a drive down field; a short forward pass placed the leather on Alexandria's 1-yard line. With the fourth down coming up, Mortimer plunged through center for the 6-pointer. The little fellow, besides making two touchdowns, kicked two extra points.

In the final minutes Alexandria made a gallant effort to overcome the margin established by the Generals, but to no avail. With Roushan tossing passes and High Travers tearing off one 20-yard run, they advanced the ball to the Generals' 37-yard line.

Clements was the W. L. star in the forewall, while the punting and ball-carrying of Mortimer stood out. Chase and Crouch also shone. Mendelson, Luckett and Haywood starred for the "Twins" on the defense, while High Travers was the best ball carrier. The Generals, by winning this game, continue in the running for the Third District honors.

The locals outplayed the Valley eleven in the final period and once lost the ball on Staunton's 1-foot line.

NAVY MEETS W. VIRGINIA WESLEYAN

Grid Game Features Big Sports Card at Annapolis.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 31.—Annapolis will be alive with fall athletic activities tomorrow, the program calling for two major football games, another between freshmen teams, and cross-country running events. All of these are of interest to the Washington and Maryland area.

St. John's College gridders, who have been flashing a good brand of the game, will engage in their only home contest entertaining the eleven of American University of Washington. The game will be played in the morning, starting at 10 o'clock.

Navy Not Holding Wesleyan Team Lightly.

Navy will engage in what is termed one of the intermediate games of its schedule, West Virginia Wesleyan being the invading force. The Middy mentors, however, are not viewing the game lightly, as it is known that the Bobcats have been pointing for the fray, and in Half Back Battle they have a serious threat. The Tars, on the other hand, will be all set to show the local fans that their slashing 31-to-0 victory over Princeton in Palmer Stadium last Saturday was not a flash in the pan.

The Wesleyan squad reached Annapolis this morning and engaged in a lengthy, though light, workout, on Farragut Field in the afternoon. They are a formidable looking lot, and Coach Cebe Ross reports his charges fit for a battle, despite the rearrangement of the team to comply with Navy's eligibility code. The game is scheduled for 2:30.

Beginning at 1:30, the Navy Plebe cross-country runners will contest with corresponding teams of the University of Maryland, and St. John's will have a cross-country trek against Johns Hopkins.

The Navy soccer team left this afternoon for Cambridge to meet Harvard in the only game away from home.

The other victim was Joe Parizek, of Crete, Neb. He was knocked out by Louis Dunkak, Nebraska freshman football star, and was carried from the ring with a brain concussion.

Managers of both fighters and all officials connected with the fight card today were summoned by County Attorney Beal for questioning.

Starboard Light, 11 to 1, Scores at Latonia

Latonia, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Closing through the stretch with rare gameness, C. Bunte's Starboard Light got up in the last few strides to beat Senator J. N. Camden's Honey Locust a scant neck in today's feature race, the Halloween Purse. The Audley Farm's Banner Bright was a distant third. Star Lassie and Bud Carlton were the only other starters.

Jockey E. James, who has scored in two features this week with Camden racers, got Honey Locust off to a winging start and soon had run Star Lassie into the ground to assume a comfortable lead. Nearing the stretch run, G. Fowler, astride Starboard Light, made his move. The Star Hampton gelding drew alongside Honey Locust 70 yards from the wire and outgamed the filly in a bitter drive. Starboard Light was lightly regarded by the talent and rewarded at $24.62 for each $2 ticket. Honey Loccust and Banner Bright were equal choices at 6 to 5.

NEW LOWS APPEAR AS STOCKS DECLINE

Losses Range From 1 to 10 Points in Third Day of Selling Wave.

New York, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—The stock market compiled an impressive list of new lows today as the cumulative effect of the Wednesday and Thursday selling opened wider gaps in prices.

Liquidation in the steels went forward steadily. Chemical, radio, metal and electrical equipment shares, together with an assortment of specialties, had prominent representation among the stocks that broke through the old 1930 minimums. Trading became fairly active in the final half hour, when the market was weakest, although last minute covering reduced most of the losses. Sales totaled 2,249,195 shares, which meant that the volume had grown larger on each day of the week's decline.

Weakness of the Steel shares, particularly noticeable in the independents, reflected the virtual abandonment of hope that the industry could show much, if any, recovery over the remainder of the year. Bethlehem's report and the statement of its president provided the keynote for the day's movement. Bethlehem was off 2 points to a new low, although it recovered partially.

Miscellaneous favorites that touched new minimums included Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Lackawanna, Missouri Kansas Texas, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, Allis Chalmers, Westinghouse, American Brown Boveri, Childs, Auburn, American Metals, Kennecott, Houston Oil, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Gillette, Radio and United Aircraft.

Ingersoll Rand Off 14.

The net decline in the active list ran from 1 to 10 points. Allied Chemical showed the extreme loss, although it had been down 12 points. Ingersoll Rand, an erratic mover, dropped 14 points.

Business reviews for the last week in October characterized trade as spotty. The fall season has developed some encouraging signs, said Dun's, although caution still governs many operations and the scope of the improvement remains restricted." Bradstreet's reported more irregularity in trade and industrial currents, "with warmer weather, lower prices for farm products and widespread discussion of methods for alleviating unemployment all given credit for a slight ebbing of activity."

The monthly review of the New York Federal Reserve Bank said available evidence pointed to "little change in general productive activities during October from the comparatively low level of September." A further moderate decline in commodity prices for October, the bank noted, carried the index for more than 450 products to a new low level for recent years. Continued weakness in metal prices was regarded by the bank as the most significant move of the month.

Grains and cotton sold lower with stocks, but prices of gilt-edge bonds rose. Call money, which has held officially at 2 per cent throughout October, an unusual occurrence, failed to firm even with the turn in the month and funds were offered outside at 1 per cent. Some dealers cut five and six months bankers bills for the purpose of bringing a larger supply to the market.

Copper List Unsettled.

The reduction in the American metal dividend unsettled the coppers. American Brown Boveri preferred broke 8 points, which seemed to reflect anxiety over its dividend rate, and was the weakest member of the electrical group, although Westinghouse was heavy, sagging under par before hardening. Radio got as low as 18¾. Coca Cola and Eastman Kodak, recent weak spots, were firmer and closed only slightly off. U. S. Steel, which on Tuesday touched 154, reached 143½, only ⅛ of a point from its year's low. At the closing quotation of 144 it was 2¾ lower.

Three-to-four-point net losses were registered by New York Central, Auburn Auto, American Tobacco "B," Columbian Carbon, Crucible Steel, Western Union, Westinghouse, Du Pont and Baldwin Locomotive. Radio, Standard Oil of New Jersey, American Telephone, General Motors and General Electric lost 1 to 2.

Wheat eased about a cent on a bearish winter crop estimate, December liquidation and favorable Argentine advices. Corn dropped 1½ cents and cotton eased 30 to 60 cents a bale.

Foreign exchanges were steady and little changed. There was a small reaction in the Spanish peseta.

Two "Blue Chip" Issues Left on Stock Exchange

New York, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Of a dozen blue-chip issues—shares selling above $200—trade on the New York Stock Exchange earlier in the year, only two remained among active issues at the close of today's session. They were Norfolk & Western, closing $214.75, and People's Gas, at $231. Both Allied Chemical and Atchison dropped out of the $200 class, closing at $196.75 and $195.75, respectively.

Allied Chemical, together with Case and New York & Harlem, has sold earlier in the year above $300, but all have declined more than 100 points. Other issues having passed out of the blue-chip class included American Telephone, Eastman, Auburn, Union Pacific, Westinghouse Electric and Western Union.

BOND TREND REACTS AND LOSES GROUND

U. S. Governments Maintain Upward Course, Despite Lone Soft Spot.

GERMAN GROUP SLUMPS

New York, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Moving out of its narrow trading rut the bond market again developed highly irregular tendencies today and closed the list much as it began it, with a forward trend in evidence.

Ignoring further evidence of the ease of money given in the reduction of five and six months' bill rates to low levels, the majority of active dollar issues moved lower, and gains, where they occurred, were small fractions. The sharp reactions in railroad bonds had the appearance of week-end realizing, and some genuine liquidation was influenced by a sagging stock market.

The forward pace of foreign bonds slowed up. German bonds and some of the Latin-American issues that have been strong reacted.

U. S. Governments Rise.

While activity in United States Governments diminished, the upward trend was maintained. Liberty first 4¼s set a new high at 102.22-32. Treasury 4s were soft. Strength of Governments, which more than any other investments accurately reflect the trend of money rates, has been the strong feature of the week's trading.

Gilt-edged rails were little affected by the day's trading, but other carrier obligations were weak. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul bonds, Chicago & Northwestern refunding 5s, Illinois Central 4s, Iowa Central first 5s, Lehigh Valley of Pennsylvania 5s, Missouri Pacific general 4s, Nickel Plate 4½s, St. Louis, San Francisco 4½s, Southern Railway 4s, Texas & Pacific 5s C and Wabash 5s reacted 1 to 8 points.

Utilities Fairly Steady.

Utilities were fairly steady. American Telephone issues were a shade lower and Consolidated Gas 5½s were unchanged. New York Edison Consolidated 5s reached a new 1930 high.

Dosses in German bonds virtually erased the gains of the previous day. German 5½s sagged ¾ in active trading and the 7s reacted 1¼. German Bank issues sold off 1 and 2 points, and municipal and industrials were generally lower.

Australian Commonwealth issues were another weak feature. The 5s of 1955 dipped 2½ and the 5s of 1957 were 4 points lower, both to new lows for the year. Brazilians were irregularly lower as profit taking cut into the gains of the past two weeks.

MERGER OF BANKS APPROVED BY POLE

U. S. Comptroller Agrees on Federal-American and Merchants Move.

LIST OF OFFICERS GIVEN

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

A certificate approving consolidation of the Federal-American National Bank and Merchants Bank & Trust Co. was signed yesterday by Comptroller of the Currency Pole and became effective at close of business last night.

At the Federal-American Bank it was announced yesterday that the directorate of the consolidated institution, the Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., had reelected retained officers of the former Merchants Bank to their present positions, effective today.

They are as follows: Fifteenth and H streets branch, Rolfe E. Bolling, Frank P. Harman, jr., and Frank E. Ghiselli, vice presidents; Harry J. Donoghue, assistant cashier; Dupont Circle branch, L. E. Schreiner, vice president; W. G. Baden and Henry S. Wattles, assistant cashiers; Brookland branch, J. L. Sherwood, vice president; W. H. Martin, assistant cashier; Pennsylvania avenue and Twentieth street branch, Ernest Gerstenberg, vice president. Thomas T. Keller, former assistant trust officer of the Merchants Bank, will become an additional assistant trust officer. The second, of the consolidated bank and will be stationed at its main office, Fourteenth and G streets.

Utilities Sales Campaign.

A combined merchandise and preferred stock campaign has been completed by the Virginia Public Service Co., with headquarters at Alexandria. It was known as the "Seven 7s Campaign," and its plan was as follows:

Starting August 7, the company set out to sell 700 electric ranges, 700 electric refrigerators, 700 electric water heaters, and 7,000 shares of its 7 per cent preferred stock in 70 days

The final results were 114 per cent of the aggregate, 111 per cent of the merchandise, and 122.9 per cent of the preferred stock quota, total sales being 1,421 ranges, 701 refrigerators, 809 water heaters, and 8,605 shares of preferred stock.

The 114 per cent of the aggregate quota was arrived at by grouping preferred stock quota and sales into units of 10 shares each, in order to bring them into balance with the merchandise items. The low standing in water heater sales is attributable mainly to the fact that the electric water heater is a new appliance in this company's territory.

Company's Rates Cut.

One of the primary motives for the campaign was the recovery, insofar as possible, of a loss in gross income brought about by a general reduction in the company's rates effected during August and amounting to about $500,000 per year. Another was the increase of the company's field of service.

October bank clearings for the city totaled $118,084,915.34, a decline of $19,883,445.71 from the month last year, but a gain from the previous month this year, when they were $97,868,931, indicative of an advance in business activity during the month just ended.

Directors of McCrory Stores Corporation have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents per share on the common and Class B common stocks, payable December 1 to stockholders of record November 20.

General Motors Reports Profits

$25,470,697 Is Earned in Fall Quarter; Equal to 53 Cents Common Share.

New York, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—General Motors Corporation today reported net earnings for the third quarter of $25,470,697, equal to 53 cents per common share, against $70,988,025, or $1.58 a share, in the corresponding period of 1929. In the June quarter the corporation earned $53,386,786, equal to $1.17 a share. The September earnings brought the total for the nine months to $131,403,125, equal to $2.85 a share of common after deducting preferred dividends, against $226,648,335, or $4.96 a share, in the comparable period of 1929.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of the corporation, said that the progress of the corporation could not be measured by the earnings for the nine months, saying there were two factors of greater relative importance this year than last. He cited that the General Motors Corporation obtained a larger percentage of the total automobile business in the United States as measured by new-car registrations than in 1929, and in August obtained in excess of 36 per cent of the domestic business. Secondly, he said that inventories of raw materials and finished products and dealers' stocks of cars and trucks on hand were reduced, while cash and net working capital were substantially increased.

Directors meet for dividend action November 6. Although the earnings of 53 cents were less than the quarterly dividend requirement of 75 cents a share, Wall street rumors of a possible reduction were recently emphatically discredited by the management.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

Preferred Stocks.

H. B. S.—I would be interested in securing names or descriptions of six or eight preferred stocks and a like number of bonds that would be recommended for purchase with view to safety of principal and maximum income compatible with safety.

Answer—Though this column never advises or recommends the purchase of any security, the following preferred stocks and bonds seem to measure up to the requirements you refer to: American Smelting & Refining second preferred cumulative, Bethlehem Steel cumulative preferred, General Motors cumulative preferred, Public Service of New Jersey cumulative preferred, American Power & Light preferred, Standard Gas cumulative preferred, Bush Terminal cumulative debenture stock, General Mills cumulative preferred and Loew's Inc. cumulative preferred; Goodyear Tire & Rubber 5s, 1957, New York Power & Light 1st 4s, 1967, North American Edison debenture 5s, 1969, Northern Pacific Power & Light 4s, 1997, Southern Railway general 4s "A," 1956, Standard Oil of New York debenture 4½s, 1951, Western Maryland 1st 4s, 1952, and Western Union Telegraph 5s, 1960.

Missouri, Kansas & Texas R. R.

H. S.—Will you kindly give me your opinion on Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad common and preferred stocks? Are they a good investment at current prices?

Answer — Net income for nine months ended September 30, 1930, of $3,108,525 was equal to only $4.66 on the $7 preferred stock, leaving a deficit for the common of 49 cents a share. These figures compare with $5,360,940, or $9 a preferred share and $2.76 a common share in the corresponding period of 1929.

The figures would indicate that there is no likelihood of the common stock dividend for the full year being earned, while there is even doubt as to that on the preferred. In consequence, the stocks can not be regarded as good investments, even at prevailing low prices.

Annapolis Dairy Products Co.

J. C. W.—Please advise me as to the general standing of Annapolis Dairy Products Co. and the probability of continuation of dividend on the stock.

Answer—As no recent statement of earnings has been published, latest figures being those for 1928, showing net before interest of $31,438, it is impossible to determine as to the probability of a continuance of the dividend lately initiated on the common shares. On December 31, 1929, current assets were $90,921, against current liabilities of $31,027, a ratio of 2.9 to 1.

Union Bag & Paper.

S. P.—I am thinking of buying some Union Bag & Paper. What do you advise?

Answer—As a non-dividend payer, the issue has no investment qualities. It is purely speculative, and a rather doubtful speculation at that.

Present year is expected to result in a deficit, even though moderate profits have been reported in recent months, following losses in the opening months of 1930. Plants are operating on the average at about 80 per cent of capacity. Competitive conditions are described as bad.

National Dairy Products and Others.

H. P. H.—Will you kindly give me your estimate of the following as investments, if in that class: National Dairy Products, Borden Co., Texas Corporation, Standard Oil of New York? Are profits of oil companies showing severe losses, as indicated by present prices of oil securities? Do you care to give an opinion of Corporate Trust shares?

Answer—National Dairy Products which on basis of present dividends offers an attractive yield for the permanent investor, is very well regarded, especially in view of increasing earnings, net for first six months of 1930 being equal to $2.16 per common share, as against $1.85 in opening six months of 1929.

Borden Co. is being managed along sound lines, and expansion program may enable it to ultimately increase present $3 dividend rate. Net for 1929 was double that of previous year and equalled $5.50 per share. Net for 1930 now estimated at $6 a share. This stock likewise held in much favor for long term investment. Because of existing low prices and limited demand, all oil companies are suffering losses in greater or less degree. However, it is estimated that Texas Corporation for 1930 will cover the $3 dividend, even though earnings will probably be far short of those for 1929. Stock may now be bought to yield about 7½ per cent. For that reason looks desirable for retention over a protracted period. Standard Oil of New York is one of most tempting oil issues. Paying $1.60 yearly in dividends, with earnings of $2.23 for year 1929 and with estimate, despite poor business conditions, of $1.75 per share for 1930, stock certainly looks attractive, especially when considered that it may now be bought to return on the investment better than 6½ per cent. Corporate Trust Shares are held in favor as a speculative investment. Securities in portfolio are all of high grade. Dividends for calendar year 1929 and for first six months of 1930 totaled $3.28 per share, and outlook is for a continuance of payments on one basis or another.

General Gas & Electric; Others.

Miss M. G. P.—I would thank you to kindly advise me about the following stocks: General Gas & Electric preferred, American Gas & Electric preferred, Bethlehem Steel common, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco B and Drug, Inc.

Answer—Around prevailing prices income yield from General Gas & Electric 6 per cent convertible B preferred is approximately 8½ per cent and because of this fact, as also because the stock has preference as to assets and cumulative annual dividends and is redeemable at $105 per share, it is regarded as quite a desirable investment. Same is likewise true of American Gas & Electric preferred, even though present income return is somewhat less than on stock just named, being about 5½ per cent. However, company's revenues are increasing and for first five months of this year balance available for common stock, after preferred dividend requirements, amounted to $8,067,440 against $7,695,000 in same period last year. Looks like good opportunity for long-pull investors to acquire an interest in one of oldest and leading utility holding companies on most favorable price terms that have prevailed for a long time.

Despite depressed business conditions dividends on Bethlehem Steel common are being amply covered, first six months earnings for that issue amounting to $4.46 a share against the dividend requirement for the period of $3. Fact that company can earn its dividend in a lean period gives to stock quite a degree of investment attraction. Reynolds B, now returning 6.5 per cent on the investment, and Drug, Inc., yielding approximately 5 per cent, are both well thought of as speculative investments for long term holding.

Loew's.

H. B.—Kindly give me some facts and an opinion of Loew's.

Answer—Loew's is one of the oldline leaders in the motion picture industry, being a producer and distributor. Of the capital stock outstanding 660,000 shares are held by Fox Film, and unofficial reports recently have been to the effect that negotiations were now under way looking toward a merger of both companies.

Earnings for the current fiscal year are estimated at between $8.50 and $9.50 a share, which has led to the belief that the dividend may be increased. Loew's is considered a good investment for long-term holding.

Hornsby Announces He Will Play 2d Base

Chicago, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Rogers Hornsby will be back at second base for the Cubs when the 1931 season opens.

The newly appointed manager of the Cubs, here today to make preparations for the spring training trip, emphatically denied that his active days as a major league player are over. He said he made a mistake in trying to get back into uniform too soon last season, before he had completely recovered from injuries.

"That was a good lesson to me," the Rajah explained. "But I'll be back in there next year. Make no mistake about that."

Hornsby said the Cubs would depart for their camp on Cataline, February 12, one week earlier that yast year.

Gallaudet Team Aims To Match 1929 Wins

Gallaudet's football squad departs early this morning by bus for Carlisle, Pa., where this afternoon the Blues will seek their fourth victory of the season in a game with the Army Medical Field Service Eleven. If successful, the pupils of Coach Teddy Hughes will have equalled Gallaudet's victory record for 1929.

Little information about the Army team has reached the Blues except that it is a heavy team, capable of testing any club's offense.

During the past several days Coach Hughes has been stressing the art of blocking in the practice sessions and is hopeful that the Blue will show the benefits of this instruction when they strike the tough opposing line.

Pitching the eighth inning for the major-league stars, composed of O'Doul, Hellmann, Bing Miller, Sweeney, Gehringer, Kress and Shires, he grouped the outfielders and infielders around the pitcher's box and retired three straight, striking out two and forcing the third to roll out to first.

Garden Is Seeking Baer-Sharkey Bout

New York, Oct. 31 (A.P.).—A new face was inserted into the muddled heavyweight championship picture today when Madison Square Garden disclosed negotiations with Max Baer, youthful San Francisco heavyweight, to fight Jack Sharkey on the Christmas fund card at the Garden December 12.

Matchmaker Tom McCardle received the consent of Baer via telephone conversations with Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, and now is waiting for word from Sharkey. The Boston gob was said to be withholding his decision until after the Stribling-Christner fight in Boston tonight.

Baer has been fighting only two years, but gained a reputation out on the Coast. He was first offered a match with Stribling, but Hoffman prefers Sharkey. McArdle expects to accept the bout although he is not under contract to the Garden.

Max Carey Released By Pittsburgh Club

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—Max Carey, former major league baseball player, is no longer a member of the coaching staff of the Pittsburgh Pirates, having been given his unconditional release today. Carey, once famous as a base runner, came to the Pirates in 1911 from South Bend in the Central League and remained with the Buccaneers until 1926, when internal dissension cropped out among the Pirates, and waivers were asked on Carey, Babe Adams and Carson Bigbee.

Max went to Brooklyn for the waiver price and he coached and played there until the end of the 1929 season when he was declared a free agent. Last spring he signed as a Pirate coach. No reason was given for the release of the coach, but it was made plain that no friction existed anywhere.

St. Alban's Win, 13-2, Besting St. Paul's

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 31.—The St. Alban's gridders of Washington, D. C., visited St. Paul's Prep today and wrested a 13-2 victory from the home clubs.

The Baltimoreans' lone score came through in the third period when White, St. Paul's left end, fell on a blocked kick behind the visitors' goal.

McGee and Cornwell, fleet ball carriers for the Washingtonians, carried most of St. Alban's sting. Both scored touchdowns after concentrated drives down the field.

SINGLE POINT G. U. PREPS' MARGIN

Gonzaga Defeated in Thriller by 20-19 Score.

In the most thrilling game of yesterday's card of scholastic and high school grid contests, Georgetown Prep's eleven averted a last-minute offense to turn back Gonzaga by the margin of 20 to 19. The battle was waged at Garrett Park and marked the first time in six years that the little Hilltoppers have bested Gonzaga.

Trailing at 20-6 in the final period, Mitchell's purple-clad warriors waged a major offensive which brought the score up to 20-19 in short order. On an attempt to buck over for the extra, and potentially tying point, Gonzaga was stopped by a stanch Prep line.

Poor Gonzaga Punt Proves Costly.

A poor kick which Dunan lifted only to Gonzaga's 30-yard line paved the way for the first Georgetown touchdown. Capt. Heekin, injected into the fray despite injuries, scored the touchdown in a 30-yard sprint around right end. He drop-kicked for the extra point.

In a drive from midfield Gonzaga's backs scored in the second period, with Viau battering over from the 3-yard line. The placement kick went awry.

The Prepmen scored twice in the third period while Gonzaga was held scoreless. Heekins opened activities by stepping 25 yards to a tally while Schroder added the extra point by way of the drop-kick route. Then Harry Moore raced 60 yards through the entire Gonzaga Team for the second tally.

In a fourth period punting duel Viau's superior spirals eventually placed Gonzaga on the eventual winners' 30-yard line. Viau, Nolan and then Viau again accomplished the 6-pointer, Nolan passed to Cleary for the extra point.

Extra Point Failure Costs Gonzaga Verdict.

After the kick-off Gonzaga went down the field from the 40-yard line for its last goal. The drive for the extra point failed just before the final whistle.

Kansas Not Through Investigating Athletes

Kansas City, Kans., Oct 31 (A.P.).—The University of Kansas is not through investigating its athletes and Chancellor E. H. Lindley is hopeful of reaching a solution of the situation which has resulted in the university's ostracism from the Six conference after this year.

Commenting on the Big Six controversy after dedicating a high school gymnasium building here, the Kansas chancellor said the inquiry had not been dropped with the termination of a hasty investigation which resulted last Wednesday in announcement by the university athletic board that available evidence did not prove any members of the football squad ineligible.

"Reliable information from any source will be welcome," he said.

Charges of subsidization and recruiting of athletes, on which the conference faculty council acted in deciding to bar the scheduling of further athletic contest with Kansas, centered chiefly around James A. Bausch, Jayhawk football star.

Henflinge, of St. Louis, whose Golden Auburn, 5-year-old chestnut son of Golden Guinea—Deserted Village and False Pride, 6-year-old brown son of Rire Aux Larmes—Fallacy, were burnt to death in a fire which broke out shortly after 10 o'clock last night in Osborn's stable in Laurel, states that he had them insured.

Lou Faulk, who visited here in the interest of the Agua Caliente Mexico meeting, left last night for an inspection tour of the breeding farms in Virginia before returning to the coast.

George Arvin, who has been handling the horses of H. Teller Archibald, of Chicago, will resign that post at the conclusion of tomorrow's racing. His position will be filled by W. R. Seamester, who has been associated with Arvin for 20 years. Arvin leaves Archibald on the best of terms and predicts a bright future for Seamester, who has been with the Archibald stable for the last three years.

Bill Brennan, one-time former trainer for the late Sam Hildreth, now connected with the Green Tree Stable, brought that establishment's Anchors Aweigh, 2-year-old brown son of Man o' War—Goodbye, down from New York to fulfill his engagement in the $10,000 Spalding Low Jenkins Handicap, a mile affair tomorrow.

Jockey Sonny Workman has been engaged to pilot Rogers Caldwell's Lady Broadcast in the $25,000 Washington Handicap, tomorrow's mile and a quarter feature. Workman also will have the mount on E. R. Bradley's Baba Kenny in the Jenkins.

Trainer Tom Healy shipped the Harry Payne Whitney's Stable over to Pimlico today.

Madder and Night Signal have been added to the schooling list.

Freddie Hopkins, who has been having great success all year with Harry Payne Whitney's Equipoise, is due in Pimlico tomorrow from New York. Equipoise is a candidate for the $40,000 Pimlico Futurity to be run Wednesday.

Charlie Meister vanned the horses of Tim Donohue, Bob Boyle, R. E. Potts and P. E. Fitzgerald, to Pimlico today. Meister will take the strings trained by Dick Carmen, jr., James Arthur and J. W. Healy to the Maryland Jockey Club's course tomorrow.

Ray Bryson will ship the main division of his stable to Pimlico tomorrow, while several of his horses will head for New Orleans, where the winter season opens on November 27 at Jefferson Park.

AMERICAN U. TO PLAY AT ANNAPOLIS

Eagles Meet St. John's This Morning; See Navy Game Later.

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY this morning meets its hardest test of the season when it tackles the St. John's eleven at Annapolis. The game has been set for the morning in order that both squads may view the Navy-West Virginia Wesleyan clash scheduled this afternoon.

Despite the loss of George Borsari, smart little quarter back and elusive open-field runner, the Eagles feel confident of making a creditable appearance. Borsari is suffering a sprained ankle.

Diehl, Full Back, to Bark Signals.

Forest Diehl, full back, will take over the signal-calling duties, while also handling his own, and Borsari's position will be filled by Will Clark, a promising freshman substitute. Due to his inexperience, Clark has not been deemed able to direct the team.

St. John's is an odds-on favorite to win, this calculation being based on its defeat of Washington and Lee last week. American has accomplished nothing nearly so impressive as that.

well known to Washington fans. Once more George Exaltis, quarter back; Tiny Pincura, 210-pound tackle, and Paul Bates, end extraordinary, the three most outstanding of the Terrors, will be watched in anticipation of brilliant performances.

Western Maryland is banking heavily on its strong defense to frustrate any and all Marine attacks. But the Marines promise to show a punch that the vaunted Terror line can not withstand. Keady has been manufacturing some weapons especially for this fray.

MARA TAKES STAND IN SUIT OF TUNNEY

the table with his counsel, Emory Buckner, and took a deep interest in each question and answer.

Mara also testified that in addition to assisting in getting Tunney the match with Dempsey he had arranged for an alternative bout between Tunney and Harry Wills, Negro heavyweight, recognized by the New York State Athletic Commission as the outstanding challenger for the title. This bout never took place and was superseded by the Tunney-Dempsey match.

Mara Claims Getting Stoneham Interested.

Outlining his labors for Tunney, Mara testified he used Charles E. Stoneham, principal owner of the New York Giants Baseball Club and of the Polo Grounds, as "a wedge to force Tex Rickard's hand" in the Dempsey matter.

He said he persuaded Stoneham to stage the match in which Tunney knocked out Tom Gibbons in 1925. Later, he said, he had Stoneham offer Harry Wills $150,000 to fight Tunney at the Polo Grounds, a move he believes forced Rickard to sign Tunney for the Dempsey bout.

NORTHWESTERN SET FOR MINNESOTA

which has been attached to their battles of the past to draw the largest crowd of the Maroon season.

Two Other Conference Battles.

Two other strictly conference games bring old rivals into new relations. Wisconsin goes to Columbus to battle Ohio State in the first meeting between these two teams in several years. Purdue, the 1929 champion, moves to Champaign to battle Illinois. Since all four teams are out of the title competition—unless something goes all wrong—nothing but whatever rivalry that can be developed is attached to these games.

Notre Dame will face its first real let-down of the season, meeting what is left of Indiana's football team at South Bend. Having disposed of Soutuhern Methodist, the Navy, Carnegie Tech and Pittsburgh in order, Notre Dame will use tomorrow's contest as a warming up affair for the Pennsylvania game a week hence. Iowa, having been defeated in its only conference engagement, moves to Detroit to tangle with the University of Detroit eleven.

With a shivering crowd of 54,000 jammed into the stands at Minneapolis, a young man named Hank Bruder, back in Northwestern's lineup after a siege of smallpox, probably will be the center of attraction. Bruder probably is the most widely advertised conference player since the days of "Red" Grange, and the strangest part of it all, he has been in only three games in the past two years.

Northwestern Appears To Have Edge.

Northwestern, with two straight conference victories, and undefeated this season and with their captain and star half back, Bruder, once more in action, appear to have the edge over Minnesota. Northwestern 'apparently does not know its own strength, but Minnesota has the reputation of coming back with a terrific rebound just when everybody expects the Gophers to fold up. Minnesota has a lone victory over Indiana as its Big Ten effort, a scoreless tie with Stanford and a defeat by Vanderbilt as its season's record. On the other hand, Northwestern has been tearing along, with or without Bruder, licking Ohio State, Tulane, Centre and Illinois decisively.

MRS. GULLIC DIES.

Ted Gullic, outfielder of the St. Louis Browns, is mourning the loss of his wife, who died in Koshkonong, Mo.

RED WINGS BUYS ROLLINGS.

Rochester, N. Y.—President Giles, of the Red Wings, has announced the purchase of Russell Rollings, young infielder, from the Boston Braves. Rollings will replace either Charley Wilson, George Toporcer or Rip Collins, as Red is an all-round infielder. He came to the Braves from the Hollywood team, where he hit .324 for the 1929 season, playing second base. Rollings batted .250 in 30 games this year for the Braves.

ARLINGTON NAMES ELECTION JUDGES

MILK PERMITS REQUIRED

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Claude O. Thomas, secretary of the electoral board of Arlington County, yesterday gave out the following list of persons who will serve as judges in Tuesday's election. The list by precincts follows:

Arlington Precinct—F. A. Coe, sr., Robert Fauntleroy, Mrs. Elizabeth Agnew, R. E. Johanson and Mrs. Ruth Lowell.

Ballston Precinct—O. J. LePrevost, H. A. Irwin, J. Foster Hagan, Mrs. Lora Sanderson and Mrs. J. J. Bray.

Carne Precinct—John Petty, Arthur P. Williams, G. Francis Comley, Carl Weaver and Milton Elliott.

Cherrydale Precinct—Ernest Shreve, Mary B. Mason, Mrs. Ames Donaldson, Mrs. Clara B. Doe and Mrs. Ruth Starkweather.

Clarendon Precinct, No. 1—A. B. Eaton, Arthur J. Porter, George H. McCrillis, Mrs. Pearl P. Eubanks and Mrs. Harry P. Snyder.

Clarendon Precinct, No. 2—A. F. Sparshott, jr., Monroe H. Stockett, E. H. Harris, Mrs. Annette Steele and Mrs. E. R. Follin.

East Falls Church Precinct—Harry A. Fellows, Wilmer H. Case, George G. Crossman, Mrs Frank M. Thompson and Mrs. Frank H. Eastman.

Glen Carlyn Precinct—Robert Ballinger, J. D. Cushman, John H. Bernard, Mrs. Naomi Jones and Mrs. Hazel Hannah.

Rosslyn Precinct—W. O. Pickett, I. N. Rich, Thomas E. Gilbert, Dr. Victor Meyers and Charles B. Green.

Virginia Highlands Precinct—E. J. Skidmore, Frank Allwine, Gilson Gardner, Mrs. H. M. Wilson and W. C. Parrish.

Declaring the statement which has been made by Thomas E. Mechem, member of the county Democratic committee, that he is opposed to the election of the county board as a part of the proposed change in the county government by districts on the grounds that the county should be governed as a unit only bears out my contention that the voters of the county are not sufficiently informed on the question to vote on it at this time, Robert H. Forman stated last night.

"If Mr. Mechem, who has accused me of changing my mind on the proposed change by saying that I recently told him I was in favor of the county manager plan, will make a close study of the act which gives the voters of the county a right to vote on the question, he will find that if they favor a change and so vote that the present magisterial districts are forthwith abolished," Mr. Forman said.

"Changing the form of government of any county or city is a serious question and should be well studied by all the voters. It is all very well for the members of the Arlington County Civic Federation to speak at mass meetings and to circulate a specially prepared paper on the subject, but it is another question as to whether the voters of the county whose votes will determine the question are thoroughly informed on all parts of the question," says Mr. Forman.

"I am satisfied that Mr. Mechem, despite the fact that he claims to be a student on county government, is not fully informed or he would not make such a statement as he has on the question of the election of the county board by districts. The fact is the electing of the board by districts is only setting up election districts and not political districts. The county will be governed as a unit if the election for a change carries," he said.

"It will be far better to defeat the proposed change and give more time to inform the voters than to put it over at this time. There is plenty of time; the election could be held next spring and still have it effective in January, 1932, just as well as voting on it on next Tuesday."

In conclusion, he said: "If the people are expected to vote favorably on a question of this kind when it is a known fact that the cost of government will be increased, ample time should beallowed for their study of this important item."

The Parent-Teacher Association at the Washington Lee High School was organized at a meeting held in the school auditorium last night with the election of Frederick P. Dewey as temporary chairman. Mrs. Grace M. Shawen was chosen temporary secretary.

Chairman Dewey announced that he will appoint a special committee of five persons to draft a constitution and by-laws and one of seven to prepare a slate for the nomination of officers, which will be elected at the meeting to be held the evening of November 13 at the school house.

County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp, addressing the meeting, said: "I would place the faculty of this high school against any in the United States as being one of the best."

Indorsing the movement for the creation of a parent-teacher association at the school, he stated that he hoped that the body would always give uplift to the community, and that there should be cooperation from both the parent and teacher.

S. P. Vandersilice, principal of the school, gave his indorsement to the organization and assured the members of his willingness to cooperate with them.

Despite the fact that residents of Arlington County last night removed all movable furniture from their front porches, groups of young folk filled with the Halloween spirit enjoyed themselves in many sections by trying out the doorbells and sprinkled flour on the lawns.

The streets were filled with the youngsters, most of whom were in costume all well supplied with all manner of noise articles until a late hour. In many of the homes others were enjoying the old-fashioned Halloween party with its usual prank.

Announcement was made from the county health department yesterday that all persons who are selling milk will be required to obtain a permit from the department.

Thus far it is stated that conditions in the county have been found satisfactory.

Speaking under the auspices of the committee from the Arlington County Civic Federation in charge of the campaign for a change in the form of county government, Wallace Lawrence, city manager of Alexandria, speaking over Station WJSV last night declared that form of government itself can not guarantee good government, but makes is possible, while poor form of government makes it impossible.

He stressed the point that the county mnger or city mnger is strictly under the control of the governing body of the city or county.

As to the election of the county bord, Mr. Lwrence sid: "It is my opinion tht the city council should be elected t large and not by districts or wards."

Among other speakers were Harry A. Fellows, Walter U. Varney, Arthur Orr, Robert N. Anderson, and Hugh J. McGrath, members of the civic federation committee.

State Senator Frank L. Ball will address the radio audience Monday night from 8:30 to 9, from the same station.

Rumors that a large number of employes at the Potomac freight yard would be furloughed was denied yesterday by Superintendent R. M. Colvin, who stated that seven or eight were furloughed because of slack business, but it is expected they will be put to work again as soon as conditions improve. The furloughing of men in the freight yards is not unusual, but is usually only temporary, according to Mr. Colvin.

Halloween was observed last night by hundreds of revelers, principally among the younger set, who paraded the streets in costume. Many parties and dances were given also. There was almost no disorder, the crowds being good humored.

The Rev. Dr. John Lee Allison, former pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church here, will occupy the pulpit at the morning and evening services tomorrow. Owing to the fact the Second Church is being redecorated, services will be held in the old Presbyterian Meeting House on South Fairfax street.

MAN, 69, MAIDEN, 16, FAIL TO GET LICENSE

Practical Policemen Arrest Love-Smitten Virginians Seeking Nuptial Rite.

FATHER OF GIRL COMING

John Martin Childress, 69 years old, of New Canton, Va., and Pearl M. Newton, 16 years old, of Wealthis, Va., were arrested yesterday when they applied at the District Courthouse for a marriage license.

They were charged with being fugitives from justice, following the receipt of information by local police that they were to be held until the girl's father, Joseph M. Newton, and Sheriff William Snoddy, of Buckingham County, Va., could arrive and take them home.

Childress, a grayhaired gentle-looking man, told police here that he was sorry if he had done anything wrong, but strongly declared that he loved the girl, and that she loved him. They didn't elope, he said, but simply drove here to be married quietly and happily.

They were arrested by Headquarters Detective W. C. Curtis. The man is being held at the First Precinct and the girl was taken to the House of Detention until she could be turned over to her father.

At the precinct where Childress was placed in a cell, the man sat all yesterday afternoon with his head buried in his arms, saying nothing in answer to questions which were put to him by newspaper reporters and curious persons.

And the "Wise Old Bird" is sleeping in his chair;
When the tied-up lambs are lost in sad reflections
And heave a heavy sigh of deep despair;

If they'll ever sell their stocks without a loss,
And the quick-turn bear can see no chance of plunder
And leaves to put a bet down on a hoss;

And the ticking of the ticker's very slow—

SHENANDOAH PICKS SCANT APPLE CROP

Long Drought Brings Train of Evils in Its Wake; Fruit Run Small.

PRICE SOLE CONSOLATION

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, Oct. 31.—The apple harvest in the Shenandoah Valley belt is finished. The 6,000,000 trees have been stripped and the growers are cleaning up the drops, which go largely to the cider mills.

A million and two hundred thousand barrels of apples have been sent from the belt or put into storage, while considerably more than that amount have been disposed of through the huge by-products plants that dot this region.

The season has held more and harder jolts for the growers than any since 1926. In most ways there has never been a season like it in the history of the apple industry here. And at the bottom of practically all these troubles is the one cause—drought. This cut the crop exceedingly short in the first place. Only 40 per cent of the 1929 yield was harvested. And 1929 also was a short-crop year.

The apples ran to small sizes. They were packed as small as 1¾ inches, never done before with standard commercial pack, except with a few of the earliest Transparents. Many 2-inch and 2¼-inch apples were packed.

Many Too Small to Pick.

In usual years the average size is 2½ inches, and 2-inch apples are regarded as culls, for cider only. The difference is apparent from the fact the 2½-inch (in diameter) apple is more than twice as large, and occupies more than twice as much space in the package as the 2-inch specimen. Staymans, particularly, suffered from lack of moisture and the intense heat. Many were not large enough to pick.

The small size and the decreased crop were not the worst factors of the deal, however. The codling moth, always a serious enemy of apple growers, this year unloosed a hurricane attack in the last moments of play, to use football jargon, and wound up by ruining an estimated 35 per cent of all the apples on the trees.

The moth outbreak was unexpected, but easily explainable. The codler thrives best in hot, dry weather. The last summer gave him every advantage.

Had Done Great Damage.

A week before picking time the growers realized that the codlers had done enormous damage. On some of the biggest and best managed orchards, they had chewed into practically all the fruit, so it had to be sold to the by-products plants.

Two weeks before the harvest, growers began to realize there had been no rainfall to wash off the unsightly residue of the early summer spraying, and that the fruit would have to be washed.

Apple washing was almost unheard of in this section, but the growers pitched in, learned what they could of it from the Department of Agriculture at Washington and from the Pacific Northwest's experience and bought, made or arranged for washing machines, or substitutes that would do the washers' work.

It is estimated that around 5 per cent of the trees in the belt are dead now, or will not revive to healthy bearing, as a result of the drought this summer, coupled with that of 1929. Trees planted on soil thin above rocks have given up the ghost in quantities.

The unexpected silver lining for the growers came in the shape of prices. For good fruit, able to pass the U. S. No. 1 inspection tests, prices have held remarkably well, considering the general industrial condition.

Radio Phenomena Explained To Optical Society Meeting

Cornell Physics Head Tells Delegates Causes of Fading, Static and Echoes in Broadcasts, and Routes Waves Sometimes Travel.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 31.—Peculiar performances of radio waves causing fading, static and echoes were discussed this afternoon by Dr. Ernest Merritt, head of the department of physics in Cornell University, before the Optical Society of America, which is holding its fifteenth annual meeting at the University of Virginia.

Other invited papers on the extremes of the spectrum were on the afternoon program. Prof. Arthur H. Compton, of the University of Chicago, Nobel prize winner for physics in 1927, and Dr. J. A. Bearden, of Johns Hopkins University, were among the speakers.

Under certain circumstances air may be transparent to light yet opaque to radio waves, just as aluminum is opaque to light and transparent to X-rays, Dr. Merritt explained in telling of how optical methods are applied to radio waves to determine how they behave. Such conditions, he said, occur in the higher levels of the atmosphere—50 to 200 miles high—where there is reason to believe electrons are present, due chiefly to sunlight, in such large numbers that the air becomes a good conductor.

"This conducting layer, called the Kennelly-Heaviside layer, reflects the radio waves back to the earth, and by reflection back and forth between this layer and the earth the waves are able to travel much farther than would otherwise be possible.

"Since the waves sometimes reach the receiving station by several different routes this often results in confusion, technically called interference, which is one of the chief causes of 'fading.' The air is also a source of disturbance due to 'static,' usually caused by electrical discharges such as strokes of lightning."

In discussing some remarkable cases of fading observed at nearby stations, Dr. Merritt told that it often happens that at two stations only 300 feet apart one may be loud at the same instant the signal is too faint to be heard at the other. This radio fading probably corresponds to the flickering shadows and distorted images that are seen when light has passed through a mass of heated air.

Radio echoes frequently heard were also discussed by Dr. Merritt. The waves that go to the Kennelly-Heaviside layer and back have to travel further than those that go direct to the receiving station and arrive later. By suitable apparatus both signals—the direct and the indirect—are often observed.

"'Round-the-world echoes' are often observed where one signal comes direct, while the other goes all the way round the world and arrives from the opposite direction. The time arrival here is about one-seventh second, the time required for the waves to travel 25,000 miles. Sometimes echoes have been observed with retardation such as to make it look as though they had been reflected from some mountain a thousand miles or so away, or possibly from the waves of the ocean.

"Very remarkable echoes have recently been observed in Europe in which the retardation may be as much as 20 seconds. This means that one signal has traveled nearly four million miles more than the other, or else that it has traveled with the speed of a radio snail. One theory is that the waves travel away from the earth until they strike a stream of electrons shot out from the sun, which turns them back again to the earth. Although rarely observed these long time echoes have at times been observed simultaneously at stations in different countries.

"Optical methods of explaining radio phenomena are being used more and more and the radio engineer must be familiar with the whole repertoire of optics."

FOUR GIRLS RETURN HOME; DREAMS GONE

Two From Washington Start for New York; Riverdale Pair Come Home.

MOVIES PROVE LURE

Two Washington girls, who left the Capital "to see the world," and two Maryland girls, who came to Washington to "enter the movies," were back in their homes last night, their dreams shattered and resolutions to stay at home in order.

Marjorie Robinson, 16 years old, of 815 Sixth street northwest, and Gertrude Allen, 15 years old, 764 Thirteenth street northeast, got as far as Frederick, Md., on their way to New York, when they were discovered in a freight car andturned over to police.

The Allen girl asserted she really did not want to leave home, but that she was urged to go along and "see the world." The girls were cold and hungry when found, although they had a blanket on the oor of the car. Chief of Police Martin N. Walsh, of Frederick, notified Washington police that the girls were being held, and parents of the two youngsters sent money for their return home.

The two Maryland girls, who left their Riverdale homes to become movie stars, were Helen Neumann, 16 years, and Ellen Pease, 15 years old. They disappeared last Sunday on their way to Sunday School and an immediate lookout for them was broadcast by police both here and in maryland.

Chief of Police Edward Aldridge, of Riverdale, finally located the pair yesterday in a rooming house here and turned them over to their families, their money gone and their hopes of movie stardom blasted, were glad to reach home.

COURT RULING HITS MARYLAND VOTERS

40 Washington Names to Be Stricken From Books on Registration.

JUDGE LOKER IS UPHELD

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 31.—The Maryland Court of Appeals this afternoon rendered an opinion affirming the ruling of Judge William M. Loker, in the Circuit Court of Calvert County, in holding unconstitutional the Legislature's declaration of intention clause governing registration of voters in the State.

This decision also applies to the dispute over the registration in certain districts of Anne Arundel County, as the identical question was raised as in Calvert County, and Chief Judge Francis Neale Parke, of the Fifth Circuit, sitting in the local court, also had declared the repealer act unconstitutional.

The decision means that the names of 40 residents of Washington who sought to vote in Calvert County and 299 in Anne Arundel County will be stricken from the books.

In the opinion of lawyers, the ruling would disfranchise thousands of voters all over the State who registered under the provisions of the 1929 law, but "suspect" lists were presented only in Calvert and Anne Arundel Counties, and time intervening between new and election is too short for action being taken elsewhere.

The appellate court's opinion was not unanimous, the vote being 4 to 3.

Features in The Post Tomorrow

Will the Democrats capture the House? How many seats will the wets win? Who will win the Senatorial races? Last minute reports on the political situation throughout the country supplemented by forecasts and comment of its own political writers will appear in The Post tomorrow.

Carlisle Bargeron, staff writer, back from a swing through the East following his travels in Illinois, Ohio and West Virginia, will size up the national political situation in a special article. Edward T. Folliard, another staff writer, will review the Maryland contest with particular reference to the Zihlman-Lewis race in the Sixth Congressional District.

There has been a lot of talk about the Democrats sweeping the election. David Rankin Barbee, Post feature writer, says he doesn't know whether they will or not, but he has prepared an interesting historical account of elections long since forgotten which students of politics and history can not afford to miss.

In addition to politics there will be many other interesting features in The Sunday Post. The tabloid magazine will be replete with good reading. A few of the titles: "A Little Girl in Old Mount Vernon," "They Attack Death's Arsenal for You and Me," "A Story of Women in the Lighthouse Service," "How Snuff Made Its Comeback," "Where Revolution Is Almost a Habit."

FALL TRADE VOLUME IS UNDER LAST YEAR

Fewer Demands for Credit Found in Fifth Reserve District in 1930.

MONEY CROPS ARE LOW

Richmond, Va., Oct. 31 (A.P.).—William W. Hoxton, chairman and Federal Reserve agent at the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, in his monthly review of credit, business and agricultural conditions, released here tonight, said that fall trade had opened up in the Fifth Reserve District, but in smaller volume than in preceding years.

The fall trade opened in September and early October, Mr. Hoxton's review said, with considerable unemployment in cities and unsatisfactory conditions in agricultural sections.

Banks of the district, that includes Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, West Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, were said to be finding less demand for credit this year than a year ago, due generally to lower levels of commercial and industrial activity. They were said to be resorting to investments to an increased degree to keep their funds employed.

Debits 8 Per Cent Under 1929.

Debits to individual, firm and corporation accounts during the five weeks that ended October 15 this year showed a seasonal increase over debits in the preceding five weeks, but were approximately 8 per cent less than debits during the corresponding period a year ago.

Commercial failures in the Fifth District in September, the review said, were more numerous than in September, 1929, and were relatively more numerous than in most other sections of the United States.

Coal production in September showed an increase over that of August, but was materially below the production of September, 1929, according to Mr. Hoxton's observation. In 1930, however, the review pointed out, industrial production was at a higher rate than at present.

Improvement in Textiles.

Conditions in the textile field were set forth as showing some signs of improvement during the last month, but mills were still operating at a lower rate than a year ago, and were working on close margins. Profits were reported to be small on the business done.

Retail trade in September, as reflected in the department store sales records, made a poor comparison with the same month of the preceding year, averaging 9 per cent less in dollar amount. Wholesale trade in five leading lines showed seasonal improvement during the month of September in comparison with August, but compared unfavorably with September, 1929, business.

Construction work provided for in permits issued and contracts awarded in September in the Fifth Reserve District reached the lowest levels in many months, the review showed.

Relatively Little Building.

The outstanding factors tending to influence the trend of business in the district now, Mr. Hoxton said, "are the large volume of unemployment and very unsatisfactory conditions in agricultural sections. With relatively little building going on and many industrial plants finding it necessary to cut their production more or less employment has decreased further during recent weeks."

"Prices of cotton and tobacco, the Fifth District's two leading money crops, are very low, cotton especially selling at the lowest price for ten years. Production figures for nearly all crops were relatively good this year in the two Carolinas, but the crops are not profitable at present prices.

"In Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia the effect of low prices is greatly increased by poor yields due to the record drought, which cut yields of most crops from 25 to 50 per cent, and some cases even more. Feed crops were perhaps hurt worse than the money crops, and in many cases farmers have been compelled to sell off most of their live stock, funds from cash crops being insufficient to enable them to purchase food for animals.

Club Rushes Work For Duck Season

Sportsmen of Washington Hope for Excellent Year on Chesapeake.

Special to The Washington Post.

Poplar Island, Md., Oct. 31.—The newly organized gun club, composed of prominent sportsmen of Washington, is well under way here in anticipation of the opening of the shooting season. A new clubhouse is being built and other improvements are being made. Two nearby islands are owned by the club and a third is owned by sportsmen from Tilghman Island, who are keeping it for baiting as well as for duck shooting.

Robert S. Harrison, Percy Harrison and S. Taylor Harrison, in addition to a number of other Eastern Shore gunners, control one of the local islands and are planning for a record-breaking ducking season. It is reported by Washington sportsmen that disease broke out among wild fowl during their breeding season in the North and that thousands of them died. This condition may decrease the number of ducks migrating to the Chesapeake.

Eastern Shore huntsmen in the area are preparing for a big season of sport and it is believed that special feed placed on the bottom of the flats in this vicinity will draw large numbers of ducks and geese, and in addition thousands of barrels of corn were thrown into the hunting grounds.
